Officials Doing Duty

The good citizenship of our state and of Washington and Multnomah counties should uphold and commend Governor Martin and Sheriffs J. W. Connell of this county and Martin Pratt of Multnomah county and the state police in their fearless efforts to uphold law and order.

No one will deny the American workman the right to collective bargaining, the right to strike in a just cause and the right to peaceful picketing.

What Other Editors Say

Should Baer Be Deported? We say yes. So do many others.

But appeals are being made to Governor Charles H. Martin to pardon him. The record shows that he has been convicted of many crimes and misdemeanors and is under indictment as an undesirable alien.

Nothing to Sneeze At

A bulletin from The Crusaders, Inc., in Portland reveals some interesting facts on salaries paid union labor leaders as published by the Tacoma, Wash., Committee of Two Hundred.

The report shows that William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is paid $25,000 a year. First Vice-President Frank Duffy, Secretary Frank Morrison and Treasurer Martin F. Ryan also draw $25,000 each.

Master Charts Course

National Grange Master L. J. Taber, in a lengthy address before the state grange, refrained from bringing up any controversial political subjects not directly related to the welfare of the farmer.

Probably Right

General Johnson, the former NRA head, probably has the right slant on the industrial situation when he says formation of powerful private codes are the only salvation of the "little man."

Newspaper Best

The best advertising medium always has been the newspaper and it will continue so for many years to come. It is the medium that is taken into the home, paid for and consumed at one's leisure.

The United States constitution is a fine old document that merits protection from all good citizens, but it has been amended several times by approval of the people in its more than 150 years of existence.

Our Yesterdays

Fifteen Years Ago Argus, June 17, 1920—Building move on in Hillsboro. Otto Erickson, local Ford man, is building an addition to his garage and plant on South Second street.

Neil Richardson Writes About His Experiences on Around-world Tour

Excerpts from letters from Neil Richardson of Hillsboro to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Richardson, reveal interesting experiences on his trip around the world as a cadet officer on the Dollar liner "President" Johnson.

"I have not been the least bit seasick at any time. My duties as a cadet officer are not hard. My uniform from 12 p. m. to 4 a. m. and from 12 noon to 4 p. m. During the midnight shift I act as lookout, and report to the bridge officers any ships or lights I see. It is also my duty to take down the Union Jack upon leaving port, or put it up on entering port. I am stationed on the bridge, to answer the telephone which connects with the captain's cabin. I also put down the crow's nest. By that is meant, I put down in a book, especially for that purpose, the exact time the ship changes speed or direction. Each time the ship changes speed or direction a bell rings.

"We eat at the officers' table, which seats six, the cadets sit on the aft side of the table. We look as neatly as possible. Our uniforms must look like the Chinks on board because they jump around for us, just like they do for the regular officers.

"We have made a 360-mile average per day. By the way, the first officer's cap blew overboard the first day of our voyage. He was wearing a cap of blue overboard the first day of our voyage. He was wearing a cap of blue overboard the first day of our voyage.

Invalidation of NRA

By its decision on Monday, the supreme court has wiped out the maximum hours and minimum wage clauses of the National Recovery Act, and, we suppose, the gate is again opened to that type of employer who is willing to exploit labor by taking advantage of the present general supply of workers and the underemployment of jobs, just as common practice in many of the larger cities before NRA fixed maximum hours and minimum wages.

Cady Named Head of School Board

(Continued from page one) John W. Kamma, Jr., of Farmington has been nominated by petition as a candidate to succeed himself as a director on the Hillsboro school board.

Because It's Right

There are advocates of NRA codes whose loyalty was marked by compliance prior to the supreme court decision. Many of these fine groups are now coming to The Journal urging that compliance be continued voluntarily.

Mill Strike Front Active This Week

Look to the Future

Amid all the talk concerning the rebuilding of Oregon's capitol one thing stands out clearly—we must plan for the future. Sincere folk are writing letters to editors or otherwise expressing themselves as to the form the building should take, how much it should cost, and all that.

Fear Alfalfa Looper Believed to Be Past

(Continued from page one) Loooper they are being rapidly killed off. The fly lays its eggs in the skin of the Looper, and when the eggs hatch out in the Looper, kills it. Weather conditions recently have been favorable for the development of the fly and a high percentage of the Loopers may now be found infested. All of which tends to indicate that the greater part of the grief is over.

Pasture Rented at Once on Ad

PASTURE to rent, running water and grass—Also Zahler, R. Z. Portland; near Bethany. 15-2p. Development Quick-Frozen Process in Local Cannery Community Aid

(By Ed. C. Coman) Plans for production of approximately 300,000 cases of quick-frozen fruits and vegetables this season by the local Ray-Maling cannery, the only plant on the coast producing a product of this type, will mean thousands of dollars in revenue to local farmers and stock-raisers. Established in 1920 as a stock company by B. E. Maling and H. W. Ray, the cannery is now one of the largest industrial concerns in Washington county.

The quick-freezing process, which has been so successfully employed in Hillsboro, was developed with fish and meats in the east and undertaken locally in 1929. The popularity and acceptance of the product has caused the cannery to increase its facilities from one freezing unit six years ago until at present seven are in use.

Briefly, the process consists of subjecting the prepared fruits and vegetables to low temperatures and freezing them solid in a short time. This method not only preserves the product but keeps the flavor intact. The more popular produce handled by this method includes strawberries, corn-on-the-cob, green peas and spinach.

Three years ago a special fleet of refrigerator cars were developed by railroads companies to transport the quick-frozen products to the eastern markets without spoilage. Coincident with the formation of the Ray-Maling company here, the cannery was changed from Tenth and Washington streets to its present site on West Baseline street. Production the first year amounted to approximately 40,000 cases of local fruited berries and a few vegetables, while employment at the peak of the cannery season did not exceed 150 persons.

At present the local cannery occupies approximately a full block and space facilities are more than three times the original. Employment at the Hillsboro plant alone family, left Wednesday for a month's trip to California and back through Yellowstone park.
