Consistent use of the classified columns of the Hillsboro Argus—"The Great Market Place of Washington County"—by Charles Meacham has proved profitable for him as it will for anyone who uses it a fair trial. The Argus ad was ordered and paid for two weeks, but the cows were sold immediately after the first issue. The advertisement cost 24 cents for the first publication.

Even better results that belong in "Believe It or Not" are reported by Mr. Meacham, who sold some hay on an ad before the paper was published. Maybe some neighbors heard the order being given over the telephone.
