Spray for Control Codling Moth Urged

Apple and pear growers in this vicinity are advised to apply the third cover spray for codling moth control as soon as possible. This recommendation was made by E. G. Thompson, assistant entomologist of the Oregon State college experiment station, who declared that the second brood of moths are now flying and a large number of eggs have already been deposited.

Eggs hatch in from seven to eight days under ordinary conditions, he stated. The spray should be applied before the eggs hatch.

Thoroughness of application is essential to control, according to Thompson. Foliage as well as the surface of the fruit should be thoroughly covered if worm injury is to be prevented. Special care in spraying the upper portion of the trees was recommended as more than half of the eggs are laid in the upper third of the tree.

Spray suggested by Thompson was powdered lead arsenate in the ratio of three pounds to 100 gallons of water. In orchards where codling moth is not a serious problem the question of site and other matters of 100 gallons of water is sufficient for control. Calcium arsenate has also been used successfully in the control of this pest.

Capitol News Letter

H. Crowell, engineer employed by the State Planning board. Space requests filed by state departments with the planning board call for an increase of 35 per cent over that in use at the time of the capitol fire last April. Crowell has the question of site and other matters of a group of three state buildings, rather than a single larger unit. The planning board, however, has not endorsed the suggestion, withholding its recommendations until the question of site and other matters have been determined.

More than 1000 people attending the opening of the cornerstone of the old capitol building saw the last fragment of the capitol walls topple to the grounds at the conclusion of the ceremony. F. G. Leary, foreman in charge of the wrecking operations, expects to have all of the debris cleared away in another week or ten days.

If Washington wants the Bonneville transmission lines on the north bank of the Columbia river it is welcome to them so far as Governor Martin of Oregon is concerned. Presence of a large steel towers necessary to carry the power lines would detract from the scenic beauty of the Columbia gorge in the opinion of the Oregon executive. Governor Martin looks for the development of a large industrial area in north Portland as soon as the cheap power from the Bonneville plant becomes available.

In the presence of a handful of state employees and newspapermen

Cornelius Folk Attend E. L. Institute; Lodge Has Picnic

Secretary of State Snell Saturday morning opened the copper casket containing the mementos which had been placed in the cornerstone of the old capitol building 62 years ago. Old newspapers, coins of ancient vintage and official documents taken from the casket will be arranged for display in a case to be placed in the state office building, where they may be viewed by the public.

Standardization of the state payroll as worked out by the budget department has not met with unanimous approval by any means. Employees whose pay checks were subjected to reductions in the general readjustment were anything but satisfied with the result and a number who failed to receive expected pay increases have voiced their disappointment over the result. With the standardization task out of the way the budget department is now expected to turn its attention to the problem of marrying women in the employ of the state.

In the 22 years of its existence the state highway department has paid out $22,333,140 in interest charges on its bonds. This amount is only slightly less than the $23,070,750 paid out in retirement of maturing bonds during the same period.
