ROAD HOUSE, DANCE HALL AND—

"Like a lot of other girls, I wanted thrills. Whatever promised one was mine. I never stopped, only so it was new. Among other things I joined an orchestra and so came to see the night life as we played at the dances."

Can you see our Mission began forward as this violinist began her account of the search for thrills. It was only a few nights ago. Her violin had already won them. Reaching down into some hearts; pleading, crying, wistful, it had poured out God's urge to the roomful of homey men to turn again home.

And so she told them how she went in for thrills and of how along with the dance hall chatter came the call to join a small church orchestra. This was something new and there might be a thrill in it and so she took that on.

With the church group she came to the Mission and so began to hear the Gospel twice over. After the service here she used to hurry away to a road house engagement.

Now, the Book says, "My word shall not return unto me void, and here again it proved itself for in time she yielded herself over to the Lord. That was the greatest thrill of all—to have Him," she told us. Choice words she gave as she told of the new riches in Him. The violin, no longer hers, but given over for service. Real joy and peace of mind now hers as musical director of an evangelistic party.

So you have it—High School and thrills, dance hall and mission hall, road house and Gospel, and then the Great Decision—He which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ.—George N. Taylor, Beaverton, Oregon.—Paid adv.
