Tell Me Another

(By Ed. Scholtz)
You may not believe in fish stories because as a rule they are far fetched, but here is one that is true. One day Ferd Toelle, Lester Bellinger and Ted and Ben Zurecher were outside the Bellinger store at West Union. As they were talking a little fish fell out of the sky and landed near where they stood. Ferd Toelle picked it up and saw that it was alive. He put it in water and it swam.

There you are! How is that for a fish story, but four witnesses are all that is needed to make it true. Now, where did that poor fish come from? Did a bird bring it from Rock creek which is almost dry? Or did it come from the Pacific ocean?

Your guess is as good as mine! Did you ever see a penny jump? Well Les Bellinger tells this one and he vouches it is true. One time while ringing up some money he accidentally dropped a penny on the side of the cash register. The penny jumped over the dime and nickel pen into the penny department.

That proves that even a penny knows where it belongs! Naturally a thing like that only happens once in a life time, but it was a good jump at that. Just like playing horseshoe. A fellow can practice until dooms day and still in a pinch he can't make the necessary ring. Then again while throwing for the fun of it rings come as easy as points.

And sometimes neither rings nor points come your way. Then it's time to quit and watch the other fellow pile on rings. Maybe!

Mouth Hygiene
(By Oregon State Board of Health)
Though there are other diseases of the mouth, pyorrhea and dental decay are the diseases that operate toward the complete destruction of the teeth. These two diseases are the greatest contributory factors toward the inception of other diseases of the mouth. In preventing pyorrhea and dental decay you are at the same time preventing at least the majority of all other diseases that the mouth is heir to.

Dental decay attacks teeth and forms cavities. Once decay starts, it progressively develops until the cavity is filled or until it attacks the pulp or nerve of the tooth and finally results in an abscess at the end of the root and usually the loss of the tooth. During the last stages of the development the patient suffers considerable pain and often ill health. A cavity should be filled in the earliest stage if trouble is to be avoided and the best results expected.

Pyorrhea does not attack the teeth directly. It attacks the foundation or supporting structure of the teeth. In other words, pyorrhea destroys the soft tissues and the bony structure in which the teeth are embedded. It is another progressive destructive process that continues without let-up until proper treatment is instituted or the supporting structure is destroyed or weakened to such an extent that the teeth become loose and are finally lost. Pyorrhea, like dental decay, should be treated in its first stages.

An unclean mouth is a disposing cause to disease. The relationship of dentistry to general health is to prevent the systemic diseases by the proper treatment of the teeth and mouth. Ignorance, indifference and neglect are largely responsible for the present prevalence of dental diseases. Ninety-seven per cent of all decay takes place on the surface of a tooth. Early treatment and proper care will do much to prevent a greater amount of decay.

Health is dependent on scrupulous cleanliness of the mouth in which circulation is kept active through intelligent stimulation with a brush. Bacteria are starved by cleaning the mouth and the tissues are fed by stimulating the circulation. Pyorrhea is not a specific germ disease as typhoid or diphtheria. It is not contagious. Pyorrhea can be prevented by proper hygienic diet and regular visits to the dentist so that he may recognize the early signs and symptoms and correct them. Pyorrhea can be cured if recognized in time and treated properly. There are no antiseptics that will cure pyorrhea—the cause must be removed. The cause is some form of irritation or a combination of irritations and faulty nutrition. Successful treatment requires skillful instrumentation and proper diet. Therefore no tooth paste, mouth wash, or any other preparation can properly cure

ASK YOURSELF
Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God"—John 3:3. That which is born of the flesh is flesh and that which is born of the spirit is spirit. The Kingdom of God is spiritual and in order to enter the Kingdom we must be born of the spirit. Have you been born again?—E. C. Bennett.—Paid adv.
