VanWinkle's Opinion Narrows Choice on Capitol Sites

SALEM-Choice of sites for the new state capitol building has been narrowed down to two by an opinion given Governor Martin by Attorney-General VanWinkle.

The legislature, when it meets in special session soon, will be able to consider building the statehouse on the old site, or on Willamette university campus, which would be added to the old location.

The hill sites favored by Governor Martin cannot be used, according to the attorney-general. Both the Grabenhorst tract and Ben Lomond park hill sites are outside the city limits, VanWinkle pointed out, and the capitol can be built only within the boundar-ies of Salem as they existed in 1864 when the city was chosen the permanent seat of government by a state-wide vote.

To build on the hills would require a constitutional amend-ment and a special eleltion to change or enlarge the seat of gov-

Projects Ready Here

Plans Call for Completion School Work First

Indications that WPA in Washington county will soon get underway, are seen in the announce-ment by A. G. Johnson, district manager of the State Employment Service here this week that men had been called through his office for work at The Dalles. This, he said, is the first WPA project to be undertaken since the Works Progress office was opened in Portland in July. Johnson be-lieves that other projects will follow rapidly as the seasonal work n the rural districts lessens.

Weighty Line Feature Local School Squad

Hillsboro high school football squad will open the season Friday at Clatskanie with one of the heaviest lines produced in a numper of years, according to B. M. Goodman, coach. During the days since practice began more than a week ago, the prospective team has been rounding into shape in good order, Coach Goodman says.

The entire team will have plenty of weight, Goodman states, with the line averaging 165 pounds and the backfield not far under that with an average of 150 pounds. One of the heavyweights, Henry Tsugawa, who tips the scales at 200 pounds, has been kept out of practice by a sprained ankle.

Men who have been worked out for the backfield of the squad include L. Garfield, Torbet, Wahner, Abts, Chase, H. Churchley, Foelker and Bumgardner, Lineweight, Goodman states, with
