A Fine Work

Most everyone will agree that the organization of the CCC has resulted in much good. It has proven its value and the suggestion from President Roosevelt that it be made a permanent branch of the government should receive favorable action. Many miles of forest trails, roads and telephone lines have been constructed in this county with the result that fire fighting has been greatly simplified. This work will do much to prevent and to help fight just such great conflagrations as brought millions in fire damage to the forests of Washington and Tillamook counties two years ago.

Establishment of a farmer-labor party seems contrary to the very nature of things. For instance how could one feel that interests were similar when it was necessary to declare martial law in a section of Idaho in order to have the pea crop handled. Also a year ago when the longshoremen strike held up the movement of wheat and other farm products to the loss of the farmer.

John Kamna, who died last week, was of that high type of German-American citizens, who have contributed so much to the business and social life of Washington county. Steady, reliable and kindly, he was highly respected.

Washington county exhibitors upheld the honor of the county in a creditable manner at the state fair and congratulations are due them for the honors won.

What Other Editors Say

Up-State Newspapers

Hands clasped and hearts warmed at a dinner given by the Portland Press club to up-state newspaper men at the Oregon hotel Monday evening. It is good news for Oregon when editors from all the state's geography meet and exchange greetings and thoughts. A vast service is constantly done by its newspapers in building up the state, but the accomplishment can be greatly increased through understanding and fellowship like that planted at such gatherings of the craft as this latest Press club dinner.

And the up-state craft is a mighty power in the premises. The home paper wields an influence that is powerful, because it is the voice of the community, the reflection of local purpose and local self-interest. The annual meets could be developed to coalesce all the state into a massed objective, and swiftly advance the commonwealth into that high destiny which a provident and prodigal nature planned.

A massed newspaper leadership specially to advance Oregon would be vastly effective. Editorial work in the up-state press is on the highest level. There is a mighty contrast in Oregon's high class university well-edited journalism and the low standards of the press that prevail in some other states. And throughout Oregon there is in the newspaper writers, a deep appreciation and affection for the landscape and nature wonders and geography and assets prodigally showered upon the Oregon country.

And in spite of what they already give, a massed newspaper movement to hurry Oregon on to greater achievement, would be heartily supported by the Oregon Press. This would be done notwithstanding the fact that in no activity is there so much endeavor to get something for nothing as is attempted on the newspaper. And no activity in the world gives so much to the public gratis, and as few thanks back.

For all the boosting of the community, for all the constructive agitation, for all the struggle at reform, for all the appeals in behalf of public movements, for all the cherry puffs of the prominent citizens, for all the free notices, free insertions, free publicity, free exploitation, free advertising, free space and influence of every kind, the community expects to give nothing back. The community accepts the service as a matter of course and expects in return to lay a few flowers on the grave of the defunct newspaper man when he is dead, and let it go at that.—Oregon Journal, September 10.

Congratulations

A happy American home is one of the blessings of life, and it seems that Mr. and Mrs. William L. Batchelder of this city have attained that blessing. Owing a home during an entire lifetime (the wife being born and reared there), rearing their children there and having them make their homes at the same place, having true lifelong friends in the community, and being so highly respected by all who know them, is indeed something to be proud of. This is a record few may attain, and the Argus extends its heartiest congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Batchelder on the celebration of their golden wedding anniversary and hopes they may live to celebrate many more anniversaries.

Just why Portland police should canvass the business men of Hillsboro to buy tickets for their dance is a mystery to many people in this community. Hillsboro has its own problems and its own organization dances and benefits where money spent in this manner is rightly needed.

Tells About the South

Greenbuck, Tenn., September 10, 1935.
 Dear Argus Editor—I just can't tell you how much I enjoy getting your paper away down here in the "Sunny South" and believe me we had a fine time. The weather was hot. But there was lots of rain and the fields had some pretty and green all summer.

Crops are good, corn is selling from 85 cents to $1 per bushel. Wheat is not raised so extensively and flour is nearly twice as high as in Oregon. Fruits are very scarce, no one around here raised any kind of fruit or berries to speak of. Meat is very high, but all the farmers have their own hogs and "Cawn" bread and biscuits so they don't go hungry.

Please tell Verne Curry I met his uncle, Theo. Drake, in Maryville, Tenn., so the world is not so big after all. Am renewing my subscription. Respectfully, MRS. B. L. GRIFFITHS.

Mazamas Enjoy Hospitality

Portland, Oregon, September 10, 1935.
 Dear Editor Argus: The Mazamas of Portland, known mainly for their interest in mountain climbing, have other activities that appeal to its large membership. Often trips are made to rather remote places in Oregon and Washington.

Last Sunday a very interesting trip was made in the vicinity of Bacons, which is a very sparsely settled locality some 10 or 12 miles north of Mountaineer. The party of 18 members left the J. Hershey homestead at about 9 o'clock and walked about four miles in a southerly direction until we came to Pebble creek. What a treat for us when we found a swimming hole. Some members of the party found some very good specimens of petrified wood and marine fossils. Our noon-day meal was a very appetizing one, since Hershey gave us some fresh cream for our coffee.

Part of our hike was on the Buxton-Vernonia road until we came to a small road that led to the Henry Glahn homestead; we hiked over this road until we came to Coal creek. Some time was spent in collecting fossils as well as admiring the big cedar trees that are to be found there. About 9 o'clock we arrived at Hershey's house, where we were asked to partake of Swiss cheese, homemade bread, and milk.

I am sure that we "city" people will never forget the hospitality that was accorded us on this trip so I take the liberty to thank all who helped to make this outing an eventful one.

The Mazamas meet every Wednesday on the roof studio of the Pacific building. Our meetings are usually entertaining ones—such as movies, music, card games, and dancing. We also have speakers on geology, botany, mountain climbing, winter sports, etc. On behalf of the Mazamas I invite your readers to attend one of our meetings, or be with us on our Sunday hikes and mountain climbing.—Elmer J. BUEHLER.

P. S.—We are subscribers to your paper, and all news events of Helvetia are particularly interesting, since that is my father's birthplace.

Growers Voting on Market Plan

 must be dumped under the present set-up. Last year 30 per cent was taken off the market and this year, the officers aver the control board dominated by California, demands that Oregon growers remove 5 per cent more from the market.

At the last session of Congress, Senator Charles L. McNary succeeded in having an amendment to the agricultural act passed which will permit the Oregon growers to be independent of California under the theory expressed in the following wire which he has sent to the association:

"It is my opinion that the walnut industry of Oregon is strong enough to stand on its own legs, and can thrive better under a marketing agreement of its own making. This statement I made to the senate committee when we were considering amendments to agricultural act. Am glad you are preparing for your hearing on September 20."

In the meantime, all walnut growers of Oregon and Washington are urged to send in their vote to the association headquarters at 325 S. E. Water ave., Portland, Ore., registering their wishes.
