"Indeed!"

"Garth pointed to the intake from the glacier stream, and signed for a descent.

The plane nosed down so steeply that the pontoons went under. Fortunately the craft was almost fool-proof. She bobbed up without plunging to the bottom. Huxby taxied shoreward against the current from the stream and the thrust of the down gulch breeze. Garth stood up to pilot the pilot. A clump of spruces stood a few of county road workers to look at Garth's mine. He has agreed to help Lilith and me ashore. If she prefers to remain abour doso."

"Indeed!"

"Quite so. He and your father can go there, or the other place—and you with them. You're a brainless fool to fancy a southern pilot can back-trail a canoe-route through unmapped forest and muskeg country."

Garth stood up to pilot the pilot. A clump of spruces stood a few yards in from the water-smoothed ledge on the right bank of the stream mouth. Huxby obeyed the signal to shut off the motor. As the propeller ceased to spin the plane glided in between the banks of the outrushing stream.

She looked up and smiled. "So nice of you, old dear. Now, if you'll fetch a cup. I'm dying to try a drink of this delightful-looking milky water."

The engineer pilot shoved his helmet. "How's that? 'Picked out, you say. Been around airplanes, have you?"

"I know how rough stone will chafe a boat," Garth replied. "Your milk is rock-flour ground off by the glacier. It's apt to be a dangerous drink. There's clear water where we're going."

He caught her by the elbows, and lowered her into Huxby's upthrust hands.

Twenty-nine Million Pounds of Butter

- In Oregon there are over a hundred modern and efficient creameries which produce annually about 29 million pounds of butter. Approximately six million pounds of this butter are shipped to other states and to the Orient.
- Many exhibits of Oregon's fine butter will be featured at this year's Silver Anniversary of the Pacific International Livestock Exposition in Portland, October 5 to 12.
- The dairy products show of this great annual event of the West is always educational and finds Oregon's butter competing favorably with that of many midwest and northwest states.
- ¶ Plan to visit this outstanding Exposition and be sure to take the family too. Officials have exerted every effort to make this event one of the finest in the Exposition's history.
- Remember, this bank is always ready and willing to co-operate in furthering the development of better farm production.
