Mrs. Lindbergh's Book at Library

"North to the Orient," by Anne Morrow Lindbergh, is one of the interesting books recently added to the library. Mrs. Lindbergh writes informally and delightfully of the airplane trip which she and her husband took in 1931. She acted as radio operator, but never members of the trip from a human point of view, telling of lands they visited, the people they met, and amusing things that happened.

This book brings us to a fuller realization of how the plane has bridged the chasm between accessibility and isolation. She writes in giving her reason for writing the book: "Yesterday's fairy tale is today's fact—must write it down so magic will not escape."

Elizabeth Corbett has another book for those who enjoyed "Young Mrs. Meigs." It is "Constant Six," a new light romance found on the rental file.

The new Oregon Blue Book has just been received, and is full of interesting facts of general information concerning our state.

"Skin Deep," by M. C. Phillips, is a book of interest to every reader. This book, as the title indicates, gives out much information concerning cosmetics. "Your Money's Worth," by Stuart Chase and F. J. Schlink, is another interesting book. In this book the tricks behind the trademarks have been made the material of caustic wit and general humor. Another book of interest is "100,000,000 Guinea Pigs," which is recalled, which has been in the library for some time.

Mrs. R. L. Smith, librarian, requests that everyone get the new library cards, as they will want to use them often with so many of the much-talked-of new books to read.

As a project of the new Youth Movement, a high school student, Ellen Lundin, has been signed for 20 hours' work a month at the library.
