

Local Gridders to Play St. Helens

Hilhi Suffers Grid Reverse

McMinnville Victors 25 to 0; St. Helens Next Foe

Suffering a severe let-down from the heights to which they climbed in the Salem game, the Hilhi grid-ders were swamped 25 to 0 on the local field Friday afternoon by a "red hot" team of McMinnville Grizzlies. This Friday the Blue and White team travels to St. Helens for the sixth game in the tough 1935 football schedule.

Sparkplugged by a brilliant, elusive halfback by the name of Mabec, the Grizzlies unleashed a powerful running and passing attack to score touchdowns in the second, third and fourth quarters of the game. The fourth score was a gift and occurred in the second quarter when Parsons, a sub back, intercepted a Hilhi pass and raced 30 yards to the goal line.

Hilhi was on the defensive during most of the hit and it was only in the closing minutes of the game that a long pass from Torbet to Wahner permitted the Blue and White to advance as far as the Grizzly 40-yard line. Wahner, still suffering from a shoulder injury received in the Salem game, was able to play but a short time and the Hilhi attack missed his passing, punting, line-bucking and field generalship.

McMinnville started the game with an offensive that swept Hilhi off its feet, rolled up tremendous yardage and netted four touchdowns. Shortly after the start of the game the Grizzlies advanced the ball from their own 45 to the Hilhi 31 on two passes, but a fumble broke up the attack at that point.

Hilhi made three unsuccessful attempts to buck the line and then punted to the McMinnville 33. The Grizzlies then launched the drive that resulted in the opening score. Eight line plays, one a 20-yard run

After the kick-off, the Grizzlies pounded at the Hilhi goal line again, but lost the ball on downs when Mabec stepped out of bounds on the half-yard line. Hilhi kicked back to the McMinnville drive right back to the 10.

A tripping penalty a short time later gave Hilhi its first chance to try offensive football. The locals were given a first down on the McMinnville 43, but failed to gain. Blenkinsop, gifted McMinnville kicker, got off a quick kick over the safety's head and Hilhi was again fighting with its back to the wall. A pass from the 10-yard line fell incomplete and a line play gained five. Torbet then heaved a long pass down the center of the field and Parsons intercepted it and race 30 yards for the second score. This time Blenkinsop converted.

Shortly after the start of the second half the Grizzlies scored again. Dullely, Mabec and Cellars alternated at packing the ball on a concerted drive to the Hilhi 15 and then Mabec duplicated his previous touchdown by racing down the sidelines into pay dirt. Near the middle of the final quarter Mabec packed the ball on a reverse from the Hilhi 44 and out ran would-be Hillsboro tacklers to score again.

With only seconds to go, Mabec opened up a passing attack that seemed destined to keep the locals from being whitewashed, but it was short lived. Torbet heaved a 15-yard pass to Wahner and the latter fought his way for another 30 yards to the McMinnville 40. Three passes were knocked down and the game ended with the ball in McMinnville's possession on the Grizzly 40.

Football fans enjoyed a few wild minutes near the close of the third period. Mabec had just returned a punt from the Hilhi 40 to the 15. Parsons pass was intercepted by Torbet on the Hilhi five and the Blue and White back raced 43 yards through a broken field. The locals made 12 yards on a line play and a pass. Cellars grabbed Torbet's next pass on his own 35 and ran 30 yards back to the Hilhi 35. On the next play Howell intercepted the third pass and was downed on the Hillsboro 28.

Mabec was easily the most outstanding player on the field, scoring three touchdowns, being on the passing or receiving end of many of Grizzly passes and gaining almost all during the game. Blenkinsop turned in a good performance at end and in the punting assignment. Dullely and Engle were outstanding in the Grizzly not in the necessity of legislation, but more in the method of accomplishment.

"Minority party men, therefore," he declared, "followed the only method open to them. Being unable to enact their proposed methods, they voted with the administration because such legislation was better than nothing."

The same explanations he said, applied to his own votes in connection with the recovery legislation and security acts.

In regard to the work relief legislation he said that when the present administration took office, there were ten million unemployed and 20 millions on relief. Today, according to the best figures available, he pointed out, there still are the same number unemployed and the same number on relief.

The president, Mott declared, is not expected to offer anything different along relief lines in the next session of congress.

He gave a brief resume of the social security legislation, the principal part of which he said, is the old-age pension. This bill will be effective in 1942 and the amount received by pensioners will depend on the earnings and length of employment. This law, he pointed out, does not take care of farmers, business men or others in like circumstances. However, another portion of the act does allow pensions from the government of $15 a month to be matched by state funds of like amount.

"Efforts were made," Mott declared, "in both houses of congress to amend the bill for unemployment insurance, but the administration carried its point. Many who believed in larger old-age pensions voted for the administration bill because it was the best that could be passed."

Mott devoted considerable time to the utilities holding company bill about which he said, there had been more misinformation and misunderstanding than any other piece of legislation passed by congress.

This bill, he explained, was prepared by two young men in the employ of the government, Wheeler and Kayburn, under which name the bill became known. The bill followed the Oregon blue sky law governing the sale of securities and was designed to do nationally what the Oregon law did within the state.

The law as first prepared was a good one, Mott said, but the two authors of the bill then attempted to write in a clause providing that in 1942 all holding companies should be dissolved. This attempted amendment was the only controversial feature in the bill.

"I hold no brief for the holding companies," Mott pointed out, "for many of them are conducted in a shady manner with manipulated stocks. Such companies should be 'curbed'."

"However," he said, "the utilities companies are owned by five million Americans and the value of these holdings is 11 billions of dollars. Congress believed that any effort at enforcement of the controversial clause would take the value out of the holdings of these people."

That was the reason congress turned thumbs down on the bill if the clause were retained, Mott said. Votes taken on the matter were overwhelming and so the president finally acceded to the congressional majority.

Of great interest in this session is the problem of roads, Mott pointed out. Congress, he said, attempted to earmark a billion dollars of the work fund, but finally con-promised on eight hundred million. Of this amount Oregon's share probably would amount to between 12 and 14 million.

On the matter of airports, Mott said that congress had authorized ports in various parts of the United States, one to be located on the Pacific coast. To take the ports out of politics, selection of sites had been placed in the hands of the army.

The first step, he said, will be to select the state in which the port is to be located. After that each community which has a proposed site will be given an opportunity to present their advantages to the engineers in charge.

In connection with the airport problem J. H. Garrett, member of the chamber of commerce airport committee, reported at the meeting that with W. G. Ide, chairman, he attended a meeting in Portland with army officers connected with the air service. The army men were asked to fly over the valley Monday morning to view its possibilities.

W. D. H. Dodson, executive vice-president of the Portland chamber of commerce, will be speaker at next Monday's meeting. It was announced, his subject will be "Washington Affairs." During the session of congress, he remains in Washington.

Banks High Loses to St. Mary's Hi

HUBER—A light but scrappy Banks high school eleven invaded the local lot last Friday, intent on making a dent in the winning streak of the Saints, and for a time it looked as if they would make good for the game was only two minutes old, when Dierickx, who scored the first point for the St. Mary's, recovered a punt on the 25-yard line but then their attack clogged and the Saints took the ball on downs.

St. Mary's started another drive down the field which ended in Preciso going thru center for 12 yards and a score. During the remainder of the half the visitors were kept constantly on the defensive, and at half time the score stood 13 to 0 in favor of St. Mary's.

At the start of the third period Hughes returned the kickoff to midfield and on the first scrimmage play, Preciso, broke through a hole in the line and with perfect interference ran unimpeded across the goal line. From this time the reserves took the field and held the Banks eleven even until a beautifully-executed forward pass, Stowell to Ireland, netted a touchdown.

With five straight victories to their credit the Saints will rest
