Aloha Man Tells Something About Silver Fox Here

(By C. M. Bebout)

ALOHA—Coming up through an unknown ancestry to the red fox and from it, through various stages and color phases, Dame Nature evolved a startling combination of blue black and bright, sparkling silver as the contrasting color effects of guard hair and under fur, constituting the royal robe of this remarkable fur bearer, the silver fox.

Discovered in the wild a half century ago, this fox was taken into captivity for the purpose of breeding and perpetuating its blood strain so as to maintain its color characteristics and protect the fur from deterioration, which would make it less attractive and less valuable.

Since then the silver fox has been the subject of deep study. A careful investigation into its characteristics, disposition, health, the internal and external parasites attacking him and all elements pertaining to his cause and existence has been and is going on, combined with very careful selective breeding.

Why all this concentration of thought, scientific investigation, exacting supervision, and protection? Because he is the king of the fur bearers. There is no other fine fur which equals the silver fox in individuality and value commercially, either in the wild or captive state.

There has been built around him a large industry extending around the earth and producing about 500,000 skins annually, conservatively valued at $2,000,000. The number of skins produced and sold in the United States is estimated to have increased from 6000 in 1923 to 170,000 in 1934. The value of the sales increased from $819,429 in 1923 to $7,144,530 in 1934. Contrary to the belief of many owing to the mild climate of the Willamette valley, silver fox fur produced in this locality is as fine as can be produced anywhere. Nature seems to provide them with a heavy growth of underfur as a protection against the dampness. The guard hair of a fine silver fox has texture that on furs grown in the colder regions.

No great difficulty has been experienced by fox farmers in the past year in selling their pelts at profitable prices. To increase consumption, the fur trade has been developing new uses for silver fox fur. It has been worked into short capes, long capes, short coats, enormous collars and wide trimmings on fur coats, cloth coats and dresses, as well as the single and two skin scarfs.

Editor's Note—On his fox ranch at Aloha, Charles M. Bebout has 64 of these silver foxes. Visitors are welcome between June 1 and January 1.

Warning Issued by Insurance Leader

SALEM—Renewed activity in mail order solicitation by the National Protective Insurance company of Kansas City, Missouri, the Franklin Life Benefit association of St. Louis, Missouri, the Sterling Casualty Insurance company of Chicago, Illinois, and the Sunset Mutual Life Insurance company of Los Angeles, California, prompts Hugh H. Earle, state insurance commissioner, to warn the public against buying insurance through the mails or from unknown persons without making sure the company and the agent have licenses from the Oregon insurance department.

Such companies and associations lead the policyholder to believe he is getting a bargain, Earle states, and in most instances the policies are extremely limited in coverage. The folly of purchasing insurance from unlicensed companies and associations is proved by the number of letters received by the insurance department from citizens who have been unable to collect when they have a claim. The policyholders find, after the company or association refuses to pay, that it is beyond reach through either the insurance department or the courts of the state.

Aloha-Huber School Declared One of Best; Clear of Debt

(By C. E. Barker)

ALOHA—Aloha-Huber school, district No. 107, was originally a part of the Reedville school district. In 1901 the Reedville school was divided and district No. 107 was formed. The first school of the present district was held in a private residence. This building was located in a patch of clearing on a spot about 300 feet north of Blanton avenue and 280 feet east of Wheeler avenue on Willow avenue. There were two teachers. The population of Huber and Aloha then consisted principally of the two families—Fazel brush and Douglas fir. Some of the pupils that went to this school were B. Wheeler, Mrs. Myrtle Cornell, Mrs. Hazel Gee and Leland Shaw.

In 1913 the district voted for a new school site and a four-room frame building was erected that summer. Two teachers were employed. In 1915 a third teacher was added and the enrollment had reached ninety. In that year an attempt was made to establish a high school. Twelve pupils enrolled as the freshman class. This high school ran along merrily for six weeks and stopped suddenly when it came to the end of its financial rope. A mass meeting the patrons decided unanimously to drop the high school, rightly judging that a high school was too big a bell for this small, sparsely settled district.

Another stout argument that had weight with the people was the fact that a standard, well equipped high school was only three miles away. The high school pupils were transferred to the Beaverton high school, which accepted their credits without question. Local eighth grade work was here for several years ever since. At the present time 60 are enrolled there. History and experience have proven the wisdom of this course. The patrons of the Aloha-Huber district should congratulate themselves that they live so near to Beaverton. Let me say this much: If there is a better organized and more efficient high school in Washington county than the one Beaverton supports, I have not yet heard of it.

In 1916 the district was enlarged to twice its original size. The enrollment increased rapidly. In 1921, a fourth teacher was added, and two years later the school had grown so large that it was found necessary to build two more classrooms. At the same time another grade was added to the playground. In 1925 a large playshed was built.

One director says, "We have plans to rebuild this playshed into a comfortable gymnasium—just as soon as we can unwind the PWA red-tape."

There are now six teachers with an enrollment of 178. The upper grades are organized for instruction and training on the departmental plan, each teacher teaching the subject in which she is specialized. The building is equipped with basement playrooms, dining room and kitchen. Warm lunches are served during the cooler winter months. A complete equipment of playground apparatus has been ordered, which will soon be installed. A wide awake Parent-Teacher association efficiently coordinates with the teachers for the progress of the school. For eighteen years the school has won prizes each year for school exhibits at Washington county fair. For three successive years Aloha-Huber school held the Washington county championship in penmanship. In athletics she often defeats larger schools.

Eighth grade graduates represent a pretty fair cross section of society in life's activities. The writer recalls offhand that from this school there have come one preacher, two artists, two lawyers, two preparing for the missionary field, one successful lawyer, five school teachers, one cartoonist and a singer of wide reputation.

Few school districts are as well off financially as No. 107. Outstandingly bonded indebtedness, none; war-time indebtedness, none. All indebtedness against the district was wiped out two years ago. It is now cash, carry and step high.

The Aloha-Huber teachers are in demand as lecturers and demonstrators at the county teachers' institutes, invitations even coming from distant counties and the state teachers' associations.
