"Can We Believe" by Gilkey is a study of new Protestantism.

"Glory Hunter: a Life of General Custer" by F. Van de Water. Legends about Custer are refuted here. He admits his physical courage, but shows Custer to have been an egotist, cruel and often stupid, desiring glory. Gives his West Point record, Civil War record, his burning of Shenandoah farms and lynching of Confederate troops. Here is a truthful record of a life that was stirring romance.

"Warrior Who Fought Custer" by Thomas Marquis is an Indian story of Custer's last battle, but gives an Indian way of life, telling of life on the reservations. Of interest to those who like Indian stories.
