Scene of Air Tragedy and Heroine

This view of the wrecked TWA airplane which crashed near Uniontown, Pa., killing 11, makes one wonder how the three survivors escaped death. Miss Nellie Otanger, right, stewardess, was the crash heroine. TYPHOID

(By Oregon State Board of Health)

The presence of typhoid fever in this state at this time emphasizes the responsibility which every community owes its citizens regarding its occurrence and spread. Typhoid fever is a deadly disease contracted through water, milk, or some other food which has been contaminated with typhoid germs. There are a few isolated communities in this state where the water supplies have not been sufficiently safeguarded to protect from infection. Outbreaks of typhoid may be due to insufficient local supervision of the water supply. Every community should have a water supply which is safe at all times. It is the duty of city and school officials to furnish a safe water supply. Practically all of the cities of Oregon are supplying their citizens with drinking water that meets all the standards of purity required for certification. There are, however, a few small towns and school districts that have been delinquent in this respect. In these it will be only a question of time until an outbreak of this infection will make its appearance. Every community must sooner or later furnish its citizens with an adequate and safe water supply.

Typoid fever can be prevented. Typhoid is a filth-borne disease. Each case comes either directly or indirectly from a previous case. The germs that cause the disease are excreted by persons who are ill with the disease or who have had it at some time. Persons who are apparently well, but who have had the disease at some time and who continue to excrete the germs are known as "carriers." Carriers who are careless in their personal habits or who neglect to wash their hands thoroughly before handling or preparing food for others are likely to contaminate any food they handle.

If the discharges from persons who are ill with typhoid or who are carriers are not carefully disposed of, the germs will pollute the soil and they will be carried into streams or wells, and thus contaminate nearby water supplies. The possibility of contamination of this sort makes it necessary for most communities to use some method of water purification.

Protect yourself from typhoid by taking the following precautions:

1. Boil all drinking water taken from all unprotected or questionable sources.
2. Boil raw milk two or three minutes and keep the supply clean, cool and covered until used.
3. Wash vegetables and fruits thoroughly before using.
4. Screen your food and living quarters against flies.
5. Wash the hands with plenty of soap and water before handling or preparing food.
6. Vaccinate against this disease; this should be repeated within five years.

The Washington county fair was curtailed with the deepening of the depression in 1932 and 1933, and devoted only to the promotion of 4-H work. Then in 1934 the work again was expanded to include general exhibits, trending toward a resumption of the regular county fair events.

Ferd Langer in Race for Senate

Ferd Langer of Sherwood, prosperous farmer, is a candidate for the nomination of the Republican ticket for state senator. Born in Multnomah county November 21, 1878. In 1889 his parents moved to Washington county and bought the large acreage, one mile north of Sherwood, where he now resides. He has been active in community affairs for many years, having served as a grade school board director for 21 years and past three years as chairman of the union high school board.

Mr. Langer has been an opponent of the sales tax. An ardent supporter of a social security pension for the aged, and stands for the fundamental rights of the people as to the development of their great natural resource. He states that the large eastern banking interests are scheming night and day in order to control the switch of the people's power. Should they succeed they will dominate this country both economically and commercially, he says. If elected, his vote will be to place this cheap electricity in the homes and on the farms, it's certain, rightful and ready market, he states.
