Candidate

M. K. Abraham, who is a candidate for the democratic nomination for sheriff. He has been a resident of the county since 1906, 15 years in the mercantile business and ten years farming experience since becoming of age. For the past ten years he has been a salesman for the Fendall Hardware at Forest Grove. He makes the following statement as to his candidacy:

"To the democratic voters, whose support I ask in the coming primary election, I can say I have always been allied actively with the democratic party.

"To all the residents of the county, whose support I ask, if nominated, I pledge an efficient, economical and dignified administration of the affairs of the office.

"In this county of seven-hundred fifty square miles of territory and assessed valuation of property approximately twenty-five million dollars the tax collection department of the office is important. I believe that much improvement can be made in this field, and if given the opportunity by the voters, I will give the matter careful study from a business and not a political viewpoint.

"In the matter of law enforcement I believe that two things are important; namely, intelligent cooperation within the office and without, and absolute honesty in all affairs of the office.

"If nominated and elected I will take entire responsibility for the office and my appointments will be made with efficiency and honesty as first considerations.

"I passed a high average and her name should have been included.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Peppard visited her brother-in-law, Leo Withler, at the Good Samaritan hospital Sunday. He underwent a major operation last week. They also visited Mr. Peppard's mother, Mrs. J. B. Local Girl on World Tour, Writes of Visit to China

Editor's Note—Impressions of countries visited are being sent to the Argus by Miss Frieda Korn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Korn of Helvetia, who left San Francisco February 21 on a six or seven months' pleasure trip around the world.

China
We arrived at Woosung about eight in the morning. This city is at the junction of the Whangpoo and Yang-tze rivers. It is widely known because of the Woosung fort, which commands the river approach to Shanghai. The large passenger ocean vessels do not stop here, but proceed up the Whangpoo river to within thirteen miles of Shanghai, where the passengers are transferred to smaller tenders and taken into Shanghai proper.

Shanghai is very impressive from the waterfront. The Bund or waterfront is lined with bank and office buildings, clubs and hotels, as modern and clean as any in our better cities.

This city is made up of foreign concessions and the "Old Walled City." The one is made up of the up-to-date banks, clubs, commercial houses, etc., the other—the Old Walled City, is typically Chinese.

Narrow streets, tiny shops, congested population, extreme poverty, unsanitary conditions, distressing sights, and terrible smells, but all of it tremendously fascinating. I complained to one in our crowd about the awful odors, but he nonchalantly said "oh this is nothing, today being as freezing as it is, everything is quite under refrigeration, you should visit this place sometime in the summer-time."

Shanghai is the commercial capital of China. It is sometimes called the "Paris of the Far East." Here the great ships of Europe and America come laden with merchandise in exchange for various farm products from the Yang-tze valley and other beautiful articles fashioned by the deft fingers of Chinese craftsmen.

The various shops out Bubbling Well road, Yates road or Tor road hold one almost spellbound. Embroidered silks and linens, so gorgeously done you almost wonder if it is not a fairland rather than a reality. Anyone who loves pretty things almost dances with glee as he sees so many, many tempting pieces, one more beautiful than the other. Truly a shoppers' paradise.

In our drive around the city after our shopping tour we saw many remnants of buildings which were bombed during the recent Japanese-Chinese trouble. Another impressive moment was when the driver took us by the Japanese barracks and practice grounds—right in the heart of the city. They made it very plain that these quarters were Japanese and that they resented it. It was surprising even to us how much heavy artillery was there.

The Cathay hotel is more or less the central meeting place for all visiting Shanghai. The night life here is tremendously interesting. Saw my first taxi dances here. A crowd of us decided we would see the various places of interest or "Shanghai at night." Some of them are only Chinese. Beautiful Chinese girls. They all sit in a circle around the dance floor and when the men wish to dance with them they simply nod to them and after the music stops they are left in the middle of the floor or wherever they may be. Other places we visited, all the girls were Russian. Other night clubs, patronized by the foreigners, are just like those in America.

We left Shanghai the following morning with the usual escort of dozens of little sampans and river boats. To thousands of Chinese these little sampans and river boats are their homes. They have no other. Always where the large ships come in they swarm around and beg for money and with large nets on poles retrieve from the river refuse thrown from the vessel.

Now to Hongkong. Not so good for me because I am laid up with a bad vaccination. Just had a long chat with Charlie Chaplin, who is also more or less confined as a result of diphtheria shots. One of the joys of traveling. Mr. Chaplin has been most charming all the way. Not any different than any of the rest of us. Takes part in all the various deck sports, chats with everyone and in general is most delightful.

The trip up Repulse Bay to Hongkong is different from any so far. Everything along the shores here is not like one would expect in the Far East. Too British. The British have occupied the Island of Hongkong since 1842. The name of the city on the Island of Hongkong is Victoria, but it is more commonly called Hongkong. The boats dock at Kowloon on the mainland and then one must ferry across the bay to Hongkong. The shops are mostly run by Hindus, some Chinese, but much in the minority. Conditions sanitary, etc., are better in every way here, but much of the local color one expects has been lost to the ways and manners of the British, all but the dozens of junkies, sampans and river boats that make up the native life along the waterfront and the inimitable rickshaws, hundreds of them.

Rode one here several times just to see what they were like. Very comfortable and it is quite surprising how fast these barefoot boys can run. It was raining the evening we were in Hongkong, but they splattered around in their barefeet just the same.

The evening lights of Kowloon viewed from Hongkong, across the bay, make a scene of surpassing beauty and blend in with the stars of the firmament.

Recorded history in China begins about 770 B. C. but tradition tells of tribes of the Han race who settled along the Yellow river before recorded time. They gradually united under powerful chiefs who taught them how to till the soil and the rudiments of civilization. Various dynasties came and went until everything gave way before the invasion by the Mongols under Genghis Khan. This conquest took a hundred years and was not completed until A. D. 1280. Genghis Khan and his grandson Kublai Khan set up the Yuan Dynasty and for 88 years this alien house dominated China. Among the foreigners employed by this administration was Marco Polo, whose account of the Court of the Great Khan gave Europe its first consciousness of the Far East.

The people are Mongolian mixed with aboriginal stock. China is chiefly an agricultural country, growing much rice, maize, wheat, tea, poppy and sugar. Their principal manufactures are silk and porcelain and hundreds of kinds of pieces of art.

I left China reluctantly, realizing that I had not even scratched the surface. China is so vast, so old in history, to spend only a few days there is hardly more than an aggravation to come again with weeks or months of time to travel north, see Peking, the Great Wall of China, The Forbidden City, and many more places equally as interesting.

Shall Radical Labor Leaders Rule Oregon?

For more than two years the economic industrial and agricultural life of this state has been in a state of almost constant turmoil because of far-reaching labor disturbances.

Lives here have been sacrificed; our farmers have suffered tremendous losses; the wheels of industry have been silenced.

WHY?

Irresponsible labor leadership has brought about this condition. For the good of organized labor, and for the good of all the people, the responsibility of labor organizations must be fixed by statute.
