

Class Planned Here Tonight

Public Invited to Attend First Aid Course

Because of the request of the administrative force and foremen of the WPA of Washington county, a course of instruction in first aid will be held in Hillsboro. This course will start tonight (Thursday) at 7 o'clock and will be held in the city hall. Subsequent dates will be announced at the first class.

This is the standard first aid course as prepared by the American Red Cross. There will be two classes a week until the course is completed.

The need for first aid is increasing at an appalling rate. There were 100,000 persons accidentally killed in the United States in 1932. It is estimated that there are 34 non-fatal automobile accidents to each fatal one, which means over one million a year. Moreover, a large number of these occur on rural highways, where medical assistance can not be secured for some time.

First aid is the immediate temporary treatment given in case of accident or sudden illness before the services of a physician can be secured.

This course is given under the auspices of the Washington county chapter of the Red Cross, and is free and open to the general public.

J. S. Tomlinson of the Portland Red Cross teaching staff, will conduct the classes.

This course was arranged by the WPA safety department. A. W. Ayling is safety inspector on WPA projects in Washington county.

Visitors Will Find Park Transformed

Made more or less exclusive in previous years by reason of the haphazard car entrance from the highway at the lone driveway in the rear, visitors now will be welcomed from the highway, where walls of native stone curve inward in a wide driveway to give a pleasing view of greenery against the lighter background of the auditorium.

Another entrance, for outbound traffic during times when traffic is congested, lies to the south of the main entrance and near the southern extremity of the park. This entrance also opens directly onto the main highway.

Changes made in the park arrangement have placed more suitable space for the use of picnic parties, and family groups, this year, will find plenty of good shade for the picnic dinner.

Framed in a grassy triangle before the auditorium, where the roadways part to allow traffic to flow both ends of the building, an 85-foot flag pole was erected last week-end.

Centerpiece of the park is the sunken garden and pools which have been arranged under the trees near where the World war cannon once held place of honor.

Here, under the direction of Wilbur Dillon, the workmen have constructed an artificial spring bubbling into a rock bottomed stream which in turn flows into a pool. The whole setting includes a naturalistic rock garden with rock plants and shrubbery blended to form a pleasing retreat.

Leading to the miniature water fall, are gravel walks, winding in and out among the trees and gardens, finally to cross a stone foot-bridge over the living stream which flows from the spring into the pool.

In basement, furnace—233 N. 3rd Below the pool and garden, workmen this week are constructing a wading pool for the youngsters who may here safely, on hot days, cool their feet without danger of accident. The pool will be shallow and the water kept fresh.

In the open space formerly used for fireworks, poles have been erected from which will be hung the high floodlights recently purchased by the fire department and under which games will be played for the amusement of the boys expected for the Happy Days celebration.

The park project has been underway since early winter with a large crew employed under WPA making the changes needed to consolidate the park area into a place of beauty.

The cost, in the main, has been carried by the federal government as part of the work relief program and the city has been called on to make only small expenditures for shrubbery and rock.

The rock for the roadways, which will do away with the dust, one of the nuisances of other celebrations, was quarried under a WPA project and crushed at the Hegarty quarry, making the cost to the city very nominal.

This week, Wilbur Dillon, manager of the celebration, reported the hiring of an aerial troop to perform from the high turrets for the amusement of visitors during the three days, which begin July 2 and close at midnight, July 4.

In addition to this free act, there will be a parachute jump from an airplane driven by Ed Ball, local pilot, on each of the three days, the dare-devil jumper being George Hopkin, McMinnville youth. His highest jump will be from 17,000 feet July 4, and the other two jumps from lesser altitudes.

Baseball games again will be a feature of each day with donkey baseball under the flood-lights at night as a special feature of amusement. A full carnival company will be in operation all three days with all the sidshows, rides and various other things of interest.

July 4, of course, will be the big day, beginning with a parade through the downtown streets in the morning, which will conclude at the park just before the patriotic exercises in charge of the American Legion.

Among the extra events scheduled, will be a horse-harness contest for women, the prize going to the woman who can sling a harness over a horse in a correct manner in the shortest possible time.

Another event will be a horse-shoe-pitching contest, Ross Brown of Hillsboro having issued a challenge to the county.

One of the biggest fireworks displays ever seen in Hillsboro will be set off at dark the evening of July 4th, according to Dillon, who declares that the firemen are not short of funds in preparation for the event.

Grange Schedules Three Meetings

Hillsboro Grange will entertain the Washington Grange at the meeting Saturday, postponed from last Saturday. Washington Grange will present the traveling gavel and will give the program.

On Wednesday night the Washington Grange council will meet at the Grange hall here and will discuss the following subjects: "Grange and Grange Programs," "Summer Programs for Grange," "How We Can Better Our Pomona Grange," and "Benefits." Derived from the State Grange that we can use in Our Home Grange.

Thursday night, June 25, the officers will entertain with a program and refreshments.

Ed. Wendt Elected Director Leisyville

The annual school meeting was held Monday night. Edward Wendt was elected director and Mrs. L. H. McIntyre was re-elected clerk. Mrs. John Dennis, Mrs. Lillian Shriner of Torrance, Cal., and Eva McCormick of Hillsboro were diners here Thursday of Mrs. L. H. Hanley.

Miss Kathleen Gregg is working in Seattle, Wash., during the summer vacation.

Penang

Penang or Prince of Wales Island lies about two miles off the western coast of Malaya and has an area of about 100 square miles. The center of it is very hilly and all of it covered, with a heavy growth of tropical trees of every kind—the average rainfall being about 106.44 inches and spread fairly evenly throughout the year. It is, therefore, green all the year round and the visitor is immediately struck by the beauty of the island when it first appears on the horizon, especially when he has experienced some very uncomfortable hot weather en route as we did.

We landed here in the evening in a rip-roaring thunderstorm and that describing it mildly—it was beautiful though, for the lightning seemed to occur on the opposite side of the island and each time a huge bolt (multiply any you have seen by 10 and you will have the approximate size) would strike the island, especially when he has experienced some very uncomfortable hot weather en route as we did.

Here again the main town officially is George Town, on the island of Penang, but most generally the city is referred to as Penang.

In 1867 Singapore, Penang and Malacca were transferred from control of the Indian government to that of the secretary of state for the British colonies and are henceforth known as the Straits Settlements.

A four-hour drive around part of the island and up into the jungle scenery of the hillsides was worthwhile. The little coves along the shore, edged with palm trees are so inviting. The native villages here are unusually attractive. Their huts, because of sudden floods, are all built on high stilts. Here the sides and roofs are made of thatched palm leaves, but on the whole they are very neat and clean from the outside.

Tin, rubber and copra are their main industries here.

Lunch at the Rynnymede hotel is the usual diversion from ships fare for the round-the-world traveler.

This place, with its spacious lawns and verandas facing a small strip of water between the island and the mainland, is most ideally located and roughly a mile from the business section. Rynnymede means something in British history. I think it was a small place on the Thames, where King John signed the Magna Charta, in 1215, I believe.

An interesting temple we visited here was a Chinese snake temple. The snakes, which are supposed to be sacred, inhabit the temple in large numbers and can be seen coiled around carvings, on the roof timbers, pictures, the shrine itself and in fact everywhere. They appeared to be very harmless, lazy things.

The following evening we left as we arrived in a terrific thunderstorm. I have been told that practically every evening it rains here, and during these summer months accompanied by thunder and lightning.

Colombo, Ceylon

We arrived inside the breakwater of this splendid harbor in the early morning and anchored some distance off shore. It seems to be the general practice of most ocean-going ships with light interchange of cargo for this port, to not dock, but anchor off shore and unload and load directly to and from lighters. The passengers, too, are transported to the shore on small tenders.

Colombo is the capital and principal city of Ceylon. Like Penang, it has a great deal of rain, most years from June to December, and hence it is beautiful and green. March is their best month of the year so we were particularly fortunate to see the jungles and seashore places at their best.

The little native village here were remarkably attractive, usually in a large grove of coconuts, very clean and because of the rains and floods built high on stilts. The natives here, especially in the out-of-the-way villages were cleaner and of a higher type than any seen thus far. During a long, interesting drive around the island I saw for the first time how tapia grows—huge fields of it, rather a spindly bush about four feet high. Also saw my first Kapok trees. Kapok grows very much like cotton, only on very large, tall trees. Here, too, ginger trees are common, the flower of which is very scented. A great game it was called by the natives "the sacred temple flower." There trees are generally found surrounding a place of worship or perhaps in the yard of a wealthy landlord. The natives here wear very little more than a loin cloth, sometimes shirts or clothes tied around their bodies, but more often practically nothing.

Two races prevail here—the Sinhalese and the Tamils. The Sinhalese make up about two-thirds of the population. They are descendants from the colonists who came from the Ganges in about the sixth century. B. C. They are Aryans in language, but a mixture of various races. The women here wear pounds and pounds of necklaces, bangles, rings and every sort of jewelry. Because the men take great pride in their long hair and the adornment of it with jeweled combs, it is quite difficult for a foreigner to tell the men from the women.

This port is famous for its precious stones. Semi-precious stone vendors are everywhere and their prices are anything they can get from the traveler—but rest assured always more than they are actually worth. A great game it was the first night out of Colombo, comparing notes and stone. We finally decided that all of us were taken in (except one lady who did obtain a perfect star sapphire).

The more important local industries here are gold, silver, brass, ivory, pottery, tortoise shell work and wood carving. A great many of the people are farmers, but that is only for local consumption.

Luncheon at the Galle Face hotel is the usual thing. A beautiful heathery overlooking the Indian ocean. Here I was able to obtain some splendid motion pictures of fishermen manipulating their native outrigger canoes.

These afternoon tea at the Mt. Lavinia hotel, built on a rocky promontory overlooking the sea, a delightful spot from which to watch the surf break along the palm-fringed shore of Ceylon.

Away from this seaport in the cool of the evening, and as seems the usual thing in these tropical places, in a heavy evening tropical rainstorm.

Hazeldale Sewing Club Pays Tribute

HAZELDALE—Hazeldale Sewing class held a pot luck dinner at their meeting last week with 12 ladies present. Mrs. S. A. Becker, WPA instructor, was honored with a beautiful basket of flowers and a handkerchief shower. Her work and encouragement have been greatly appreciated by this community. The class will continue through June, meeting on Wednesday afternoons.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Chapman held "open house" at their newly renovated store at Chapman corner on Saturday evening, with a large crowd in attendance. Dancing was enjoyed to the music of Joe Onstead on his accordion, Fred Gasmeyer on the French harp, and Mr. Fuqua of Portland. The place has been enlarged and a new room, containing booths, has been added.

Sunday evening, Lefty Carson, well known yodeler was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Chapman and entertained many friends with his songs, etc.

On Saturday evening Mrs. J. C. Smith entertained with a card party, the honor guest being Miss Isabel Forrester of Vancouver, B. C. Other guests were Mrs. George McLeland and her daughter Isabel and James Robertson, all of Portland.

Mrs. Tom Miller and her mother Mrs. A. L. Danford of Portland, were dinner guests of Mrs. L. M. Bierly of Kinton on Friday of last week Mrs. Danford who is making an extended visit with her daughter, is an old time resident of Kinton, having made her home there 30 years ago.

Roy Betzer, who has lived in this neighborhood for some time, has rented his home and moved to Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Syverson family have disposed of their home at Timber and are making their home with Mr. Syverson's parents on Cooper mountain.

At the annual school meeting held last Monday evening in the school house, Max Berger was re-elected director for three years, and William P. Brooks as clerk for one year.

Mrs. Harold Shaper and baby daughter are home from the Jones hospital.
