illary, and the American Legion auxiliary. All were in automobiles.

Behind the United Spanish War Veterans' car, was a veteran in the clothing and equipment of the Philippine uprising guarded by a veteran in the uniform of the army of that day, carrying a gun.

Next in procession came the Boy Scouts trailing a camp wagon and the sea scouts in full uniform.

Behind them the fraternal organization floats led by the O. O. F. and Rebekah float leading.

On this float were the various officers of the lodges in regalia, while the float itself was decked in the lodge colors and was one of the most elaborate floats of the section.

The Townsend pension club float trimmed in climbing roses and the revolving band representing the revolving idea of the plan. The float depicted the idea, "Youth for Labor, Old Age for Pleasure." This float was the same one which took first prize in the Rose Festival floral parade in Portland.

Behind the Townsend float came the float of the Rainbow girls, decked in the club colors and carrying a number of the members in uniform.

The Coffee club float, next in line, was in green and pink, the centerpiece being a huge coffee pot covered in pink roses, with little boys dressed as volunteer firemen and little girls as coffee servers.

Forest Grove Townsend club entered a float decorated in red, white and blue flowers, interspersed with green leaves, the work of these decorations covering the whole vehicle.

Sherwood, represented in the parade already by its band, entered a float carrying a group of little men and women clad in the costumes of 1776.

Following the civic clubs' section of the parade, came the commercial floats which included various pieces of motorized farm machinery decked in red, white and blue bunting.

In the line of march also were two automobiles of ancient vintage, including a 1914 Ford with all its brass and a Buick, which dated back to 1908. Both machines were operating as efficiently as ever. The Ford was the F. L. Girls' club entry, and the Buick was entered by Lawrence Glasse.

Covering nearly a block, the city fire trucks, manned by the firemen in uniform, fell into line near the end of the parade. One fire truck carried a number of members of the firemen's auxiliary dressed in white with red capes.

Visitor Lost During Happy Days Event

Hopkins of Newberg; Ray Scott and C. M. Clover of Portland. All day July 4, these four oldsters played martial music like a bunch of youngsters.

Wilbur Dillon, some think, probably will be flat footed from the weight of the responsibility placed on his shoulders in connection with managing the firemen's celebration. Apparently none were as busy as he during the three last days of the week in which he managed to keep going and late to insure the success of the affair.

Many a little fellow was saved the long separation from his Pa and Ma Saturday by kindly firemen who gathered up a lost youngster, managed to obtain a name, maybe, between sobs, and broadcast over the speaker system for parents. The reunion usually was swift and more than joyous.

The Weir speech was somewhat marred for a lot of his listeners because of the fire crackers bursting here and there, and the blare of the merry-go-round.

E. J. Griffith, state administrator of the works progress administration, piloted by K. E. Tillotson, resident engineer for the WPA.

Cornelius Farmer Lost After Wreck

that highwaymen would have committed murder for this small sum.

The family reported that apparently he suffered no injury in the wreck, which happened when a truck crowded them from the highway and the car struck an electric light pole head-on.

In checking at home, officers report that they can find no reason for Epier deliberately deserting his wife and two small children.

At the time of the wreck, it is said, Epier was wearing a suit furnished by Thomas S. Sholes. None could miss an introduction to her because her name was painted on the sides of the machine. Sholes also furnished Hudson eight and Hudson six sedans for the four attendants to the "Goddess."

July 4, the crowds on Main street throughout the day reminded one of a busy Saturday afternoon, so many couples and others walking up and down the streets, talking, window shopping and attending the Venetian theatre.
