Tacoma Police Seek Two Confidence Men

(By Portland Better Business Bureau, Inc.) Oregon citizens are warned to be on the lookout for a pair of confidence men wanted by the Tacoma, Wash., police on charges based upon a complaint of a Tacoma woman who claims to have been swindled out of several hundred dollars by these promoters, according to a report issued today by the Portland Better Business Bureau.

The bureau release states that one of the men gave his name as H. H. Walker, who claimed to be an investor in a defunct Seattle company. He professed to be forming the investors into a form of stockholders' committee. In this manner he secured $100 from his victim.

The following day one L. H. Howard called upon the same party and represented himself to be a geologist from the University of Minnesota. He claimed to hold a certain oil option and persuaded the complainant to turn over cash and securities to him in what was supposed to be a joint venture in which the "investor" would reap a quick and substantial profit.

These two are reported to be traveling together in a 1935 Ford two-door sedan and any information on their whereabouts should be communicated to the Portland Better Business Bureau or the Tacoma police department.

Battle With Fire on Baseline Won

Fought for two days by neighbors and volunteers from nearby fire which burned approximately 50 acres of slash and second growth timber on land owned by Dick Schoeler and Ben Heinrich last Tuesday and Wednesday, was brought under control Thursday with damage limited to a few cords of wood and a few green trees.

For a time Wednesday afternoon, 100 acres of green timber, two miles east of Hillsboro on the Baseline road, owned by E. J. Books, was menaced when the fire into the edge of Books' woods.

Escape Trio Get Sentence

Dotson Draws 20 Years for Part in Jail Break

Five years each in the state penitentiary on four indictments, the last two to run concurrently, were meted out to Charles A. Dotson, confessed check passer and recaptured jail breaker, by Circuit Judge R. Frank Peters here Friday. This sentence gives Dotson 15 years in the state prison. Imposition of sentence on the jail break charge was postponed.

Daniel Gault, jointly indicted with Annetta Edmund on a charge of aiding the escape of a prisoner from legal confinement, received a year's penitentiary sentence the same day. He had previously pleaded guilty.

The Edmund woman after withdrawing a plea of not guilty and pleading guilty drew a two-year term in the state prison on the same indictment and this will run concurrently with a sentence of two years on an indictment charging perjury.

Sentence was postponed by Judge Peters for Charles C. Merrill, who withdrew a plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. He was allowed his liberty.
