

Apartments Total Loss in Sunday Fire

Remaining Part of Historic Building Destroyed;
Loss $3000

Fire, which apparently started from an unknown cause on the back porch of an upstairs room in the apartment house on Fourth avenue between Jackson and Lincoln streets Sunday afternoon at 3:45 o'clock, burned the structure to the ground. Loss was estimated by J. H. Garrett, owner, at $3000, of which $2000 was insured.

The building once was a part of the Tualatin hotel located in the space now occupied by Weil's Department store. A newer part of the old structure, the building was about 35 years old. Garrett purchased it from John Foote and moved it to the location which it had occupied since, when the remainder of the building was torn down to make way for the modern Weil building in 1919.

All Occupied

All four apartments were rented, Garrett said Monday, occupants being Bud Peschka, Tom Walters, Mary Lilly and E. C. Fennell. All of the personal effects of residents on the top floor were burned while a portion of the property of those occupying the two lower apartments was saved.

When the fire was first discovered, the flames had attained considerable headway and before the fire department could reach the scene, the back wall, back part of the room and woodshed were afire. Twenty minutes after the fire was discovered the roof fell in and shortly after that a hot water tank exploded with sufficient force to tear away any roof which remained.

The force of the explosion was sufficient to throw a piece of iron pipe, about a foot long, into a group of boys standing near the Ellington residence.

Sparks from the fire were carried south and a later fire call brought the department to the old livery stable next to the post office, where fire was smoldering in the shingles. This fire was put out before damage was done to the building.

Monday noon the fire department was called to the Earl Donelson home just north of Hillsboro, where a stubble fire was out of control behind the Donelson house and racing toward the highway. The department tank wagon rapidly reduced the flames and confined them to a safe area.

Where Uncle Sam is Harnessing the Columbia

Upper view shows a section of the main spillway dam reaching across the Columbia river from Bradford island on the Oregon shore to the Washington side. Huge lift gates will be installed between each of the giant piers to permit control of the river level. Lower view—The power house structure between the Oregon shore and Bradford island. When fully installed this will generate nearly 600,000 electrical horsepower. Locks have been built on the Oregon side to permit ships and river craft to pass inland to The Dalles nearly 200 miles from the sea. One obtains a magnificent view of the entire project from the Columbia River highway (U. S. 30) running along the Oregon side of the river. Photo courtesy Oregon State Highway commission.
