

Active Club Year Planned

Hazeldale Group Convenes; Several Families Move

(By Mrs. J. C. Smith)

HAZELDALE—Hazeldale Community club held its first meeting of the season Friday evening, with a large crowd in attendance. Officers of the club were in charge of arrangements, headed by Mrs. Al Jorder, president, Mrs. Curtis J. Birdell, entertained with two vocal solos. Community singing, led by Crawford Porter, was enjoyed after which games and dancing took place. It is planned to have a similar affair following the next business meeting October 9.

Henry Chapman, Jake Kemmer and Freddie Gasser are on a hunting trip in eastern Oregon. Mrs. George Morrill of Midway is staying with Mrs. Chapman.

Leonard Hallack of Portland, eldest grandson of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Syverson, whose serious injury was reported last week, is slowly recovering at St. Vincent's hospital, but it will be some time before the real extent of his injuries is learned.

Last Sunday was observed as promotion and rally day in the Sunday school. Songs and recitations were rendered by the children. A cradle roll department was established, four babies being enrolled. Classes meet every Sunday morning at 9:45 in the basement of the school house.

Mrs. John Black Jr. of Portland and formerly of this community was taken suddenly ill last week, and is in a serious condition at the Emanuel hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Beecher Jones of Sacramento, Cal., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Syverson over the week-end. Mr. Jones is a brother to Mrs. Syverson and has been living in Hillsboro for several months on account of poor health. He is much improved now and they are returning to California shortly.

Miss Annabelle Morrill of Midway spent the week-end with Mrs. Henry Chapman.

New Family Here

A new student in the fifth grade is June Golden. Her parents have moved onto the Chris Murphy place. They came from Milford, Utah, recently.

Move to Portland

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hard and family and Mrs. Ida Wiley, who have lived here for several years, are moving to Portland.

Agricultural Picture Not All Gloom; Total Farm Income Best Since 1930

1933 CORN CROP 2,300,000,000 BU.

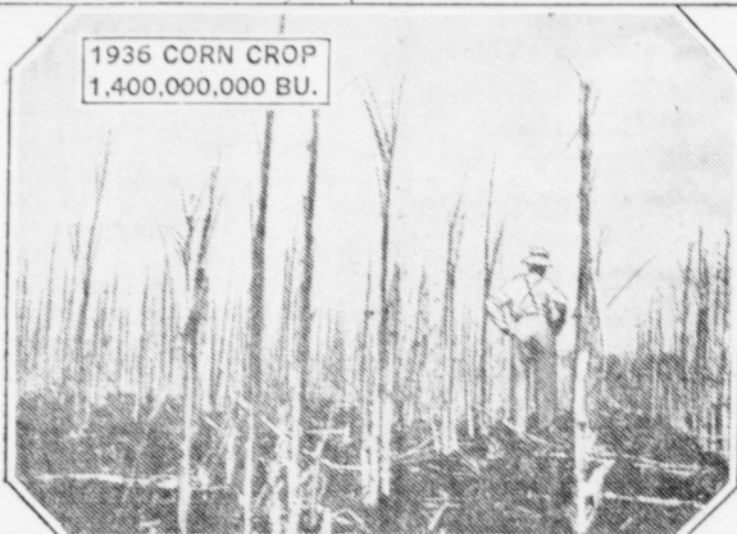

GROSS FARM INCOME

1930	8,000,000,000
1931	6,000,000,000
1932	4,300,000,000
1933	5,400,000,000
1934	6,000,000,000
1935	6,900,000,000
1936	7,500,000,000

AFTER the barrage of news stories painting desperate pictures of a country's crops wiped out by unprecedented drought, come cold, hard figures to show that the 1936 American farm scene is not entirely dismal.

There is, for instance, the matter of total farm cash income, which seems certain to be the highest since 1930. This income was up approximately one-third billion dollars for the first six months of this year, compared with the corresponding 1935 period.

With the advance continuing, agricultural authorities set the conservative income for the year at $7,500,000,000—a 10 per cent increase over last year.

1936 CORN CROP 1,400,000,000 BU.

Reason for this, of course, is that prices have risen more than production has decreased. This figures lend little encouragement to those middle western farmers who have nothing to show for the seed they planted last spring and who will share not one penny in the total farm income.

But many American farmers still can smile. Along the west coast there has been abundant rainfall, and drought elsewhere has raised demand for west coast products. California figures are typical. Estimated crop value for 1936 is $666,991,000 against $553,250,000 for 1935, a 20 per cent increase.

The Pacific Northwest reports better than average crops, of exceptional quality.

Swinging eastward into the corn belt, where drought and grasshoppers worked their greatest damage, the outlook becomes darker. But there are highlights even here.

Speaking for the entire section, the wheat crop is good, the corn crop very poor. Oats, hay, soy beans, potatoes, fruits, and other crops have been the salvation of many farmers who raised little corn. Dairy revenues and returns from livestock sales also have helped.

Iowa did not grow much fall corn this summer, but the farm income for that state—estimated at almost $500,000,000—will be the best in six years.

Illinois figures to take the corn production title from Iowa, with a probable yield of nearly 200,000,000 bushels. Other Illinois crops look good.

REPORTS from other breadbasket states strike an optimistic note—except from the Dakotas, where almost the entire population of both states will have to be taken care of this winter by Works Progress Administration jobs or by direct cash relief. But even in the Dakotas, fair yields of some grains are reported.

Most of the south suffered little from drought, and southern farmers in general had a good crop year. The situation is much the same in the east and New England.

Thus, from a survey of the entire nation, it appears that most American farmers will enjoy comfortable returns for their work this year.

to those less fortunate who either succumb or are left deformed for life.

The old fashioned "bilious attack," with diarrhea, or constipation, vomiting and fever between 101 to 103, is the usual beginning, but in addition there is stiffness in the spine and the neck and the child is unable to bend forward. This combination should be the immediate signal to call a doctor, but even a nurse specialist may have to take fluid from the spinal column for laboratory tests before the presence of the disease can be established.

Hillsboro Matron Dies Here Monday

Nellie Geneva Woolsey, 27, wife of Albert Woolsey of Vernonia, died Monday in a local hospital where she had been confined for the last three weeks following an illness which began last May. She has been a resident here for the last four years.

Mrs. Woolsey was born August 5, 1909, at Payette, Idaho, and was married June 9, 1928. Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon from the Adventist church with burial in the Odd Fellows cemetery here under the direction of Donelson & Sewell.

Besides the widower, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Stella Keam; brothers Donald, Willis and Kenneth; sisters, Hazel, Amie and Lola Keam, all of Hillsboro, and Mrs. Francis VanDomelen of Banks. A grandmother also survives, Mrs. Annie Custard of Hillsboro.

experiment which accounts for the widening and varied opinions found in magazines and papers. It is, however, agreed by authorities that it is by the nose and throat that the disease spreads and possibly by infected milk.

The rules for controlling the disease are the familiar ones of health, and if consistently observed would prevent not only this but many a siege of the serious diseases of whooping cough, scarlet fever and measles.

"The rules: Keep your child away from houses where there is sickness and at home when he is ill. Let him play in the open air, and see to it that he washes his hands before eating, does not use public towels, or common drinking cup, and covers his mouth when coughing or sneezing."

From one to 18 days may be required between the time of exposure and when signs of the disease appear, but five to 10 days is the usual time.

Because the infection enters through the nose and mouth and extends into the spine, the cases vary according to which nerves are affected. Many cases recover without paralysis, and one theory is that most adults have had the disease but did not know it because they escaped the deforming paralysis. Such cases are no different from a bad cold or flu, and are only recognized when another member of the family suddenly cannot walk or use his arms.

It is probably by means of such persons that the infection is spread starting in his early years in various club offices until last year when he led his first club, a garden club. This year he was leader of the Tualatin dairy and pig clubs and it was through his leadership that the group of boys, making up the various Tualatin clubs, was successful in making a record never before equaled in Washington county when they won all of the 4-H judging contests, namely, livestock, crops, poultry and rabbit. Clayton was the high scoring judge in two of these contests and a member of every team.

The dairy club, which he led, won the Carnation Milk Company's Calif. Manna trophy this year as the outstanding 4-H dairy club at the Washington county fair.

In addition to the above records, Clayton was successful in winning at the county and state fairs this year, six first places, six second places, three third and six fourth places.

He was recently named as the outstanding boy of the county to be a guest of the First National Bank of Portland during a three-day visit to the Pacific International Livestock Exposition.

Clayton was graduated from the Tualatin high school last spring. He plans to work on the home farm this year and enter college next year.

The modest and unselfish spirit that marks him as a true leader is evidenced by the following comment which concluded his short talk made at the state fair in response to his receiving the outstanding club member award: "I hope that I can guide and encourage my two younger brothers, Wilbur and Willis, so that they will have the opportunity that I have had to win honors in 4-H club work."
