

Bandon Red Cross Work Told at Dinner

Red Cross is doing a job of which we may all be proud, said Mrs. Alice Maxwell, field worker of the National Red Cross for Oregon, in speaking about the Bandon disaster at a dinner meeting of the county chapter at the K. P. hall Thursday night. You may rest assured that your $1 for the member ship roll-call will do a great deal of good, she said.

Mrs. Maxwell also stressed the good work done by the International League of Junior Red Cross, which is active in 60 countries. She told of an incident where the Red Cross had all preparations made for taking care of a typhoon in Miami before the storm really struck, after receiving word that it was coming. That the Red Cross is prepared to do things immediately was proven when $25,000 for relief was at Bandon the day after the fire, Sunday, and ready to go to work at once as reported by the mayor. By Sunday night every soul was under shelter with blankets and by Monday night a mess house was opened at a warehouse. By Wednesday tents were all equipped with floors, army cots, blankets and pads. Caseworkers were busy seeing what was needed, and by Thursday noon the wiring for electricity was completed. A warehouse for clothes was ready by Friday night, and by Saturday a piano had been procured and benches built for church and social purposes.

An outstanding thing about the disaster was the condition, she said. A Marshfield physician, assisted by nurses and others with first aid training, established a dispensary on the grounds at once. Illness has been prevented and everybody is well and happy.

Eighty temporary homes are being constructed in order to take the people out of the tents before the rain sets in. These may be moved later for garages, etc., she said. All Bandon citizens must wear identification tags in order to keep transients from coming in to partake of relief supplies. Investigators of the Red Cross are busy finding out what families lost, their insurance, resources, liabilities, etc., in order to give individual family rehabilitation. The Red Cross is rebuilding the home life of 750 families, she said. The people of Oregon were highly praised for their ready response in funds and supplies for the sufferers.

Other speakers were Miss Jane Doyle of Portland, executive secretary, who told something about the International Red Cross meeting she attended at Tokio, Japan, two years ago, in which 60 nations took part. They were invited there so that Japan could show its appreciation for the help of the nations in the disaster of 1928. They were royally entertained by the Japanese government, she reported. The principal discussions pertained to service to mankind, and Miss Doyle said it was like one big family discussing plans for their family's health and welfare.

Miss Barbara Potts, physical instructor of the Hillsboro union high school and grade schools, told of the training she received at the Red Cross first aid and life saving camp at Russian River, California, this summer. She has several first aid and life-saving classes in the schools now. Mrs. Margaret C. Bean, director of roll-call in Multnomah county, was also introduced.

W. F. Norman, president of the county chapter, presided, and gave a resume of Red Cross work before introducing the speakers. C. C. Colt, state roll-call chairman, was unable to be present on account of illness.

The meeting was well attended, including officers and directors of the county chapter, heads and representatives from civic and patriotic groups, and others interested. Dinner was served by the Pythian Sisters.

During the three years' ministry of the pastor, he reports splendid progress for the church. Also the local financial budget has gradually increased to more than twice what it was three years ago.

The men's "99" class, with the minister as teacher, elected the following new officers recently: John West Sr., president; J. V. Collins, vice-president; W. E. Lewis, secretary-treasurer, and Charles Dumas, assistant teacher. In November the class is sponsoring a "Fathers and Sons" banquet.
