Lottery Racket, Warning Subject "Dad" to the Boys

(By Portland Better Business Bureau, Inc.)

Although it is quite generally known that all lottery tickets are illegal in this country, many otherwise law-abiding citizens buy them with the hope of becoming rich over-night. The Portland Better Business Bureau reports that most of their lottery promotions, however, are merely rackets and no drawing is held.

Recent investigations by the Montreal Better Business Bureau indicate that promoters in Canada have started "sweeps" and after a large quantity of tickets are sold, the organizers themselves tip off the police. In due course the premises occupied are raided and a small quantity of tickets, literature, etc., left as "window dressing" are seized. Subsequently a "front" for the organizers will appear before the court, admit his guilt and pay a nominal fine. Later, when purchasers of tickets inquire regarding the draw, they are told that no drawing is possible due to seizure of the records by police.

Hundreds of thousands of counterfeit tickets in sweepstakes operated legally in foreign countries have been sold in the United States, the bureau reports. Post authorities in the United States and Canada have instituted a plan to curb illegal sweepstakes. In one month last year the United States government issued 450 fraud orders on lottery and sweepstakes promotions originating in Canada, Cuba, Bermuda, Mexico, France and other countries.
