Washington County Herd Leads State in High Test

Highest testing herd in 15 counties, where herds are under production tests, was the C. H. Hamford herd of 10 pure bred Jerseys in Washington county, according to the October report of testing associations. John Cordes of this county had the second highest testing cow, a grade Jersey which produced 1460 pounds of milk and 87.6 pounds of fat.

The highest testing cow in the 15 counties reporting was owned by R. T. Jackson of the Central Oregon association, a registered Jersey which produced 1522 pounds of milk and 93.9 pounds of fat.

Following are the records of the high producing cows for the month of October:

County Health Unit Approved at Meet

The Washington County Health Unit was approved at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. Hugh McGilvra, of the Washington County Health association, also spoke for the new unit, pointing out that it is a part of the new social security law and that appropriation for the unit has been made.

She said that she could understand the viewpoint taken by Mrs. Kruger, but that the new unit would not furnish medical and surgical service to the public. The unit is rather to furnish adequate service in the schools to stop contagion in its beginning, and assist in checking physical defects in the school children.

The program, she pointed out, is entirely educational, with the individuals obtaining their own medical and surgical attention after the trouble has been found. The state of Oregon, she said, suffered a yearly loss through disease and death among children of $45,000 in health.

Mrs. Kruger then attacked the health unit as unnecessary by reason of the possibility of furnishing the same service through teachers of physical education. This was not the time, she declared, to bring about new departments of government with the farmers' hands off by strikers and with prospects of curtailed crops by reason of the drought. Taxes mount and mount, she pointed out, and become a bigger and bigger burden to the home owners.

One of the large number of women supporting the health unit then quoted the amount of money to be used to curtail Bang's disease and urged that the children of the county be given an equal chance for health as the cows.

Ralph Easter, chairman of the Hillsboro school board, said that he was speaking for his board and also for the high school. "With the right kind of doctor at the head of the unit and capable nurses," he said, "the department is bound to be a success."

O. B. Kraus, superintendent of schools, pointed out that there are 10,000 school children in the county of school age, and the cost of the new unit, distributed to each child, would only amount to 50 cents each. He also declared that it was not fair to ask a private physician to devote a quarter of his time to examinations in the schools and public work among the school children.

Put to a vote at this time, the motion to strike the unit from the budget was overwhelmingly lost.

When the budget had been completed, Mrs. Kruger introduced a resolution to pay maintenance cuts on the county highway system out of car license and gasoline tax money by taking 30 percent of this money collected by the state and returning it to the counties of the state on an equal basis.

Judge Templeton declared that the resolution was defective in that any diversion of state highway

County Planners to Continue Work

County Planners to Continue Work (Continued from page 1) "I have a great deal of sympathy for our county courts," Reynolds declared. "They must take the brunt of the public demands and plan ways and means of proceeding."

The planning commission can play an important part by making a study of the need of the county," Humphrey told his audience, "and also give advice and backing to the county court."

Humphrey cited the work being done to untangle the mistakes made in allowing homesteading of public lands anywhere, without proper consideration of the ultimate results, citing the cost to government of making the more remote lands available by costly roads.

Tax foreclosures of lands should be given study, he suggested.

In 1938 the levy can be cut and the county will collect the same amount of money. In 1937 the warrant debt will be wiped out.

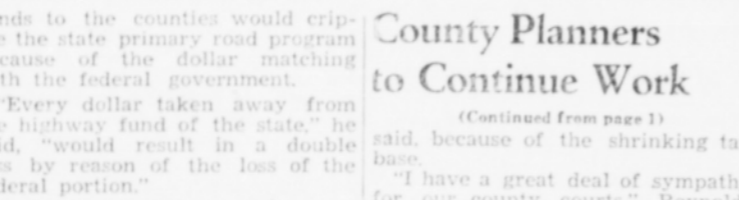

A motion by H. R. Findley of Cedar Mills to pass a resolution asking the legislature to eliminate state control of the farm to market roads and return them to the county, was passed. There are now 68 miles of this type of highway in the county.

Advocates of the resolution declared that the county can accomplish more work with the money used by the state and thereby increase the efficiency of the farm to market roads in this county.
