WASHINGTON LETTER BY SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON—Certain things nothing in a long time has shaken official Washington so deeply as the tempest raised by President Roosevelt's supreme court proposal.

Proponents of the Roosevelt plan, on the other hand, see a real danger in "judicial dictatorship," which they claim now exists in the high court.

Proponents go on to point out that ample precedent exists for "monkeying" with the court to bring it into line with prevailing political or economic philosophy.

Democracy, they contend, is effective just so long as the people's desires are met, and when a court stands between the will of the people and its legislature, democracy is endangered.

A COURT which would be more responsive to the desires of the electorate as expressed through Congress, could and should become one of the main bulwarks of our democratic system.

THEY go even beyond this, these foes of the president's plan, they contend that the supreme court is the main bulwark of American independence.
