Geology Group Sees Collection at VanDomele's

 MOUNTAINDALE—Oneen house was held at the J. L. Vandomelon house Sunday morning when about sixty Portland members of the Geological Society of the Oregon Country led by Reginald Reynolds and Dr. E. T. Hodge of the Oregon State college, called to look over Vandomelon's extensive Indian relic collection. He has one of the finest individual collections of arrowheads in this part of the country. The larger part of the collection has been found in the Dairy Creek valley and at Sauvie's Island. Arrangements have been made for Thomas Carney, photographer for the society, to photograph the collection in the near future.

Helo Flood Victims
 The benefit "500" party sponsored by the Past Chiefs' club at the James Mathiesen home Friday afternoon was a success. Eight tables of cards were in play but a total of $11.15 was netted, the balance being given by persons who were unable to attend the party. Mrs. Valbur Dillon had high score and Mrs. Max Drexler, second. The money was given to the Red Cross for the benefit of eastern flood relief.

 taining of those practices which tend to increase and prolong the productivity of this natural resource.

J. M. Vanderzanden, chairman of the Roy community, in commenting on the 1937 program, said: "This is something the operator of any kind of a farm can not afford to pass up. It encourages the adoption of farm practices which conserve the soil and prolong its profitable production. If farmers generally understood, they would, in my opinion, not lose any time in proceeding to take care of their own interests by filing their crop data."

Find Program Important
 Farmers are finding the soil building payments, which are a feature of the program, important in meeting the present high cost of red clover and alfalfa seed, according to Glen Ritchey, head of the Forest Grove committee.

"With possible earnings ranging from $2 to $4 per acre, subject to the farm allowance, for seeding red clover and alfalfa, we can just about figure the price of seed that much less per acre," says Ritchey.

Chairmen of the various committees were practically unanimous Saturday in believing that nearly any farm, regardless of size, could profit by listing crop data with the county association preparatory to performance if they so desired later on.

Local Man Writes of Trip to Florida
 R. F. Taylor of Hillsboro, who with his wife is touring Florida, writes in a letter to The Argus, of his trip from Washington south, praising the roads. The homes in Florida are beyond description, he said.

"Coming through Jacksonville," he wrote, "the water was over the running boards but it was a godsend to some of those natives. A little water on some of them and you could tell the difference."

He plans to visit the big swamps of Florida and return home soon.

Councilman E. A. Griffith, chairman of the finance committee, declared that he wanted a month for the report of the condition of city funds placed before his committee hereafter before bills are allowed.

"We have been working in the dark," Griffith declared, "and have no idea from month to month what the condition of the various funds is."

He was promised an auditor's report each month previous to the regular council meeting.
