Farm Cash Income From Milk Makes New Five-Year High

FARMERS' cash income from the nation's milk production totaled $1,417,000,000 for 1936, an increase of $128,000,000, or 9.9 per cent over the 1935 total, according to the Milk Industry Foundation.
Farm milk income has increased nearly 50 per cent since the depression low. Cash milk income for December 1936 of $113,000,000 was 91.5 per cent of the 1924-29 average compared with the 78.5 index figure for agriculture as a whole.
Since milk production in 1936 is estimated to have increased by 2 per cent to 3 per cent over 1935, the past year's larger cash payments to farmers are chiefly due to higher unit prices paid for milk. Increasing consumption of milk in fluid form, for which farmers receive their highest prices per quart, also helped to increase dairy farmers' milk checks.

While supply and demand are in fair adjustment for the nation as a whole, there has been an unusually high production of milk in some sections of the country.
Farmers are evidently feeding their herds well despite high feed prices. This, together with the high percentage of cows being milked, has caused a substantial increase in milk production in most markets.

To aid farm income this increase in production can best be marketed through stimulating consumption of milk in fluid form, as milk used for butter and other products brings the dairy farmer lower prices.
commerce meeting Monday noon will be in charge of E. L. Ross, state senator, and Ray L. Antrim, state representative.
They will discuss the past session of the legislature and tell of its accomplishments and defend any statements made by C. K. Chapman in his talk this week.

Chapman Has Word for State Solons

last minute when they were by mistake, brought out for vote.
If the employers had possessed the same leadership," Chapman related, "the anti-labor block might have succeeded in passing some of the proposed laws." Eastern Washington county voted with labor, in defeating the bill.
However, according to Chapman, this bill was faulty in that it did not prevent strikes as planned, and the pressure for legislation along this line was lessened with the ending of the strike on the Portland waterfront. The pressure came from upstate, where the farmers feared curtailment of their business and loss of products unless something was done.

Result of Thought
Many of those favoring labor legislation did not realize, Chapman declared, that such legislation is the result of long and careful thought and experiment, particularly in a democracy. While the English passed such legislation in 1880, only recently have the laws been amended to eliminate mistakes and make them beneficially operative.
Other legislation of importance dealt with social security. Unemployment laws were tightened, he said, and enforcement will be more stringent. In this, the future holds the promise that the laws will be stretched to cover all industry, big or little. Businessmen will have to gear themselves to expect a heavier tax burden in this respect, he related.
Dependent and crippled children were brought under the laws governing relief, and will hereafter be taken care of through the relief setup, he said. As a whole, Chapman remarked, the social security legislation of Oregon is about the last word in administrative setup.

Attempt Change
Chapman declared that every effort was made to put the state relief administration on a political basis, but in this first attempt the so-called "wire hairs," despite their hatred of the relief administration, voted to keep the setup out of politics.
In closing his talk, he outlined the troubles with the state budget, and declared that there was now in it a million dollars of fake money and a million dollars of real money.

TOSSED DEATH ASIDE

Some years ago back in Detroit, Mich., the city turned out to do honor to a man who had built a car. It was such a machine as men bought who could pay the top price. But the gathering was not because of the car but out of regard for the man himself. He had won them by long unselfish devotion to the public good.
After a musical number, the mayor called on an Episcopal clergyman to lead in prayer. He stood and began: "We see at the cryer of the universe, wisdom, love, and power. Good words those and now we call them up, look them over, study them for our own cheer. Wisdom, Love, and Power. We have seen parents who loved their children too much for their own good. They refused to punish the youngster when they did wrong and the kid dies grew up wild. That was love without wisdom. Then there is love other kind who feel their power. See the boss with the hard face! See the office force have a spell whenever he peers in? That is power without the balance of love. But the full our hunger and made them God as having all power and with it all wisdom to carry out in love whatever he might decree.
A person of infinite Wisdom—Love—Power at the center of the universe. Yes. And closer that that to us. For on a day, in the person of his Son, he stripped off his eternal glory and stepped down to tent with us. God in the person of Jesus Christ had a day on earth. He tasted the full our hunger and made them and weariness. Then His holy walk. He proved Himself to be very God of the day. He chose to suffer at the hands of a Jewish mob on a Roman cross. But death could not hold Him. He tossed it aside—Up from the grave He arose, with a mighty triumph o'er His foes." And today as sinful man falls down to cry out for mercy He blots out the stain on the page and writes in Eternal Life and with it—the Righteousness of God. He who knew no sin was born into this scene to become sin for us that we might become the righteousness of God in Him—Geo. N. Taylor, Beaverton.—Paid adv.
