Ball Season to Open Locally on April 18

First sample of the new Washington county league baseball will be delivered to the public April 18, when the league will open the season in Hillsboro with all six teams in the field in a triple header consisting of five innings each.

Special program is being prepared for the opening which will include a parade before the game, several short talks, and an exhibition drill by the Moose drill team of the local lodge, sponsors of the Hillsboro team. Opponents will be named at the grounds.

Regular schedule games will begin April 23, to complete the series June 27, and the opening game will furnish several interesting events with the local merchants offering prizes for the first home-run of the season; first double play; first two-base hit; pitcher turning in the best performance, etc.

Next practice of the local team will be at 10:30 a. m. Sunday in the ball park. The team will be coached by Wesley Claussen, who has had much experience in baseball. He is the high school coach here.

In Portland he was named the outstanding player in Legion baseball and was all city fielder and top hitter at Jefferson high school and a star on the University of Oregon team.

Baseball players who wish to take advantage of the coaching and who desire a tryout, will be welcomed at the next practice session. More players also are needed by the local team, according to the management.

Yanks and Pirates Are Picked to Finish First, but With Reservations

BY PHILIP MARTIN

WITH fear and trembling, Mrs. Martin's son, Philip, takes pen in hand and, after judicious study of the signs of the zodiac and perusal of the old farmer's almanac, picks:

The Yankees, Red Sox, and Tigers to finish in that order in the American League come the last of September, and the Pirates, Cubs, and Cardinals to wind up that way in the National League.

There are plenty of reasons for picking the Yankees to repeat in the junior loop, but three are enough.

The first is the apparent return to form of Lefty Gomez. The goofy one, who was acknowledged to be in the throes of a big slump all last year, seems to have regained that hard, high one that made him the scourge of the league in 1935.

El Goof won only 13 for the rambling Ruppert Rifles last year, and while his ineffectiveness was comparatively unfelt due to the Yankees' preponderant lead in the circuit, his return to form is more than welcome in a loop that, over the winter, has been strengthened all the way down by profitable trades.

The second reason is Lou Gehrig. The Iron Man makes the attack of the Rifles as potent as it was in Babe Ruth's heyday. The stolid Dutchman, while not the colorful player the Bam was, is nevertheless an inspirational ball player.

When he starts leaning on the apple, the Yankees get an epidemic of base hits, and power baseball is just what the New Yorkers go to town on.

The third reason is the outfield. It takes a back seat to none in the majors, what with Jake Powell, Joe DiMaggio, and George Selkirk running around loose, both offensively and defensively.

We're one of the majority let down by the Boston Red Sox last season. But acting on the assumption that with the available talent such a flop can't occur two seasons in a row, we're picking Cronin's crew to cop place money this year.

The big reason why the Sox didn't finish higher last season was the lack of morale, admittedly caused by the big money paid big name stars. During the off season Cronin has disciplined his players and, with a change or two in the lineup, plus potential increase in pitching strength, he ought to bring the boys together.

The Tigers are a big question mark. On Greenberg's wrist and Cochrane's ability to stay behind the bat most of the season hinges their fate. Greenberg has declared his oft-broken wrist is as good as it ever was, and Mickey thinks he's good for another season. If both are sincere, the Tigers may take top prize; if not, they may beat out the Athletics for cellar honors.

THIS correspondent admits that selection of Pittsburgh for top honors in the National League is a gamble—a gamble on the return to form of Cy Blanton. The youngster, leading earned-run chucker in the loop in 1935, lost his effectiveness last season to the second-year jinx. This year the young right-hander may mean the pennant for the Bucs.

The Cubs ought to be a better outfit, with Curt Davis doing a lot better than he did on the hill last season, and with the first base difficulty ironed out by acquisition of Jimmy Collins. Attack in the outfield is the big problem.

Third position lies between the Cards and the Giants, with the former getting the call due to the weak link at first for the Giants. The Gothamites aren't going to be the same without Boss Bill Terry at the initial sack.

The Cards, on the other hand, still will continue to have dissension in the ranks due to the presence of Dizzy Dean. It is this observer's sincere belief that Diz, great pitcher though he is, will be a bigger detriment to the club through his petty bickering than he is an asset through his workhorse ability.

The Cards have a fine team and, Dizz willing, can work together to cop the gonfalon with plenty to spare. But a great deal depends on Mr. Dean. He's "on the spot" again as it appears.
