National Music Week Observed Here May 2 to 8

National music week will be celebrated May 2 until May 8 with special concerts, musicales, and programs throughout the country. Mrs. Walter Denton of Salem, state music chairman, urges all communities to observe the week in some manner. Keynote of the national program is "Foster Local Music Talent," and emphasis is being placed on providing activities for young people.

Governor Martin has issued the following statement:

"It is again my pleasure as governor of Oregon to call to the attention of the people of Oregon National Music week, May 2 to 8, 1937. Every community realizes the significance and importance that music plays in the daily lives of our citizens and our appreciation for the classics—old and modern—grows apace. During this week numerous special musical programs will be held throughout the state, and Oregon may well be proud of its part in the observance of National Music week."

Local organizations are asked to co-operate by preparing their programs during this week with recognition of music, either local talent or otherwise.

Rood Writes of Training Life

Wayne Rood, who recently joined the Marines and is located at San Diego, writes his family of his experiences there as follows:

"This weather agrees with me. I'm brown as can be. We put in long hours, too. From 5 a. m. to 10 p. m. From 9 to 10 (evening) is our own time—maybe."

"Drill all day, but will be through 'boot camp' in three weeks. Can't go to town or any place. After these three weeks we spend three weeks on the rifle range and three weeks in school and then, Lord only knows, we are done. So far I'm the only one in my platoon (40 men) who gets excellent appearance in 'troop inspection'—that included every thing—this 'boot camp' is plenty tough."

"When I go to bed I don't move until 5 a. m.—then at it again."

"I saw my first 'dress parade' yesterday and it was a beautiful sight. All dressed in blue uniforms, white caps and belts."

"The fleet came in last week. About 25 or 30 boats—that was some sight. There must be about 40 or 50 boats here now, two airplane carriers."

"I sure like this country and I'll never live in Oregon again for very long. I don't know when I'll get home, maybe not for four years and maybe as soon as my training is through."

"Well it's close to 'taps' so I have to close. Tell everyone 'hello!'"

Large Delegation Attends Congress Parent-Teachers

Washington county was represented in the biennial convention of the Oregon Congress of Parents and Teachers, which closed a four-day session in Portland last Friday, by 22 official delegates and many others who attended part or all of the 16 sessions held in the Multnomah hotel. Aside from Portland only one other county had as many registered delegates.

Washington, West Timber and Shute received special recognition in membership. Garden Home was honored for National Parent-Teacher magazine subscriptions.

"No home is one hundred per cent that does not give something to the community," said Mrs. John Hayes in the opening session April 13. Mrs. Hayes came from Idaho to represent the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and conducted a school of instruction.

Parent-Teacher associations representing this county were Aloha-Huber, Cedar Mill, Durham, Forest Grove, Garden Home, Hillsboro, Dilley, North Plains, Reedville, Shute, and Tigard.

Library Notes

Latest fiction books: "Quiet Shore" by Walter Havighurst. This is a story of an American family, who settled on the shores of Lake Erie in early days. Time brought rapid changes and the new generation was divided between two ways of life, the soil and the city. The children of Roger Bradley's first wife were attached to the land, those of the second wife were city men. The story is of the feud between the two branches, so unlike in all but the tie of common heritage which binds them to the living past. A quiet, interesting story, "Sun Goes Down," by Flannery Lewis. This story is half portrait, half memoir of a remarkable old lady, Lewis writes with remarkable affectionate humor of her peculiarities, of her prejudice against tourists, automobiles and modern plumbing of her lifelong refusal to rise early in the morning and of her clocks which have all stopped. He portrays an irresistible character, skeptical and independent of mind, shrewdly practical and tolerant in the larger matters.

Non-fiction story: "Tales of an Empty Cabin" by Grey Owl, who is a game warden in a national park in Saskatchewan. He writes of the beaver colony transplanted from Ontario and of the life of men and animals in the wilderness. His experience of hunting and trapping, his tales of the rail, his Indian and animal lore are of fascinating interest.

Also two new mysteries: "Moon Saw Murder," by Gail Oliver, and "Murder Walks the Corridors," by James Ferry.
