Free Use Park Granted Fair

Washington county fair has been granted free use of the city park and the auditorium for September 2, 3 and 4, providing the fair pay all expenses of lighting and cleaning the park afterwards. Ed L. Moore, fair secretary, said this week. Permission was granted by the park commission, which includes E. J. McAlvar, J. L. Anderson and R. E. Wiley.

This committee recently was appointed by Mayor J. H. Garrett under a provision of the city charter, which gives the commission authority to fix schedule of charges for all uses including public functions.

Many Groups Help—Use of the park has always been granted the fair, Moore said, but no assurance has been given by the commission will be continued in the future.

Throughout the depression the fair has barely made expenses and only through the influence and efforts of the Grange, Farmers' Union, boys' and girls' 4-H clubs and the Future Farmers, with the assistance of the county court, has the fair been continued, Moore said. Without the state appropriation for premiums and funds derived from dog racing, the fair would be unable to continue.

Admission Free—Free admission policy of the fair has been adopted since the improvement to the park and the removal of the high fence, leaving no way of enforcing admissions.

Plans this year include a pioneer and homecoming event for residents of this county as something much in demand, Moore said.

Farmers Raise Excellent Seed

Washington county farmers are urged to use 4-H Minnesota 13 seed corn reports L. E. Francis, assistant county agent. This locally grown seed, which is now handled under a co-operative marketing program and distributed by the seed dealers of the county, is the finest local seed available. Under the co-operative marketing plan the seed is cleaned, graded and blended into uniform lots with a standard germination of 97 per cent.

Corn trials in past years have indicated that this 4-H seed is superior to outside seed corn in the production of grain and is very satisfactory in the production of silage from both a tonnage and quality standpoint.

Six tons of the seed have been produced by the club members, who are enrolled in the Commercial-National Bank corn growing contest, and have been placed in the hands of the various seed dealers of the county and with the Co-operative association of Portland.
