Auto Mishaps Succeed Disease

Tuberculosis, the dread disease that took more lives of Oregonians than any other bodily plague in 1936, bows only to automobile accidents in assisting the business of death. Last year 376 residents of the state died from some form of consumption, but 378 were slain by motor vehicles. The winter's wave of influenza scourged but 226 persons in Oregon, to place third in the list of causes of death, violent or otherwise, in Oregon. This figure is less than two-thirds of the total who succumbed after automobile mishaps. Added to the automobile's "champion" casualty list, however, must be also the five thousand odd persons who were injured in cars tangling on highways of the state in 1936. Many of this host will be permanently disabled for work, some permanently disfigured. Experienced Drivers Err
 Figures gathered by the Oregon State Motor association indicate that the experienced driver is not the safest. Nine out of every ten of the 376 persons killed in Oregon automobile accidents last year were the victims of drivers who had more than a year's experience behind the wheel. Balanced Safety Program of the Congregational church held a picnic in the gardens at the home of Mrs. William Stewart Thursday. Mrs. T. A. Dungan of Portland, president of the Woman's state board department of the Congregational church, gave an inspirational talk. This was followed by a picnic luncheon served under the shade trees.
 A balanced safety program is of equal importance with a balanced municipal budget, reminds the Oregon State Motor association.

 Miss Ruth Denney and Miss Noma Brown were among the twenty nurses to graduate from the Multnomah hospital at the exercises held Monday evening at the Grace Memorial church, Portland. Miss Brown left the last of the week for White Salmon, Wash., where she has been called to take charge of a nursing case.

Mrs. Elsie M. Christensen entertained a large group of relatives at her home on Canyon road May 30. Present were Mr. and Mrs. James Minor and family, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gratton, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Gratton and family and Sister M. Eugenia, all of Portland. Grange Meets Saturday

Producers Usually Enter Advertising

CORVALLIS—Producers in the long advertise their products in one way or another. Sometimes it is by a definite advertising program, and sometimes it is through the medium of distress prices, says H. E. Cosby, head of the poultry department at Oregon State college. Growers of poultry meats have paid tremendous sums of money by the route of low prices received in order to get their products advertised to Mr. and Mrs. Consumer, he says. "Growers should never lose sight of one fact, and they should preach it until a solution is on the way," he pointed out. "The turkey grower and the chicken man are manufacturers of perishable articles of foodstuffs. If they do not advertise their products for their own protection, it is as certain as death and taxes that disastrously low prices will advertise them at a much greater cost in years of normal and excess production."

Although Japan is opposed to communism, the Ainus of the northern isles have practiced communism for hundreds of years. Marriage is arranged after a thorough course in free love and workers pool their resources, dividing equally among all. Money is not used, nor is there barter and exchange.

Cedar Mill Woman Writes About Trip Through the Eastern States

(By Mrs. A. R. Pearson)
 We, my husband and I, could think of no better place in which to spend our vacation this spring than in some of the large cities of the eastern states. We chose the train method of traveling, leaving all our cares behind us. Our first timely stop was in Chicago, where friends took it upon themselves to show us the city. My first impression of Chicago was that of dirt and noise with its elevated trains, thundering overhead and smoke from the numerous factories doing their share of smokemaking. Later I awoke to the grandeur of Lake Michigan, which is lined with parks and recreational resorts. Its museums, skyscrapers, department stores and residential districts are an honor to its name and a place to spend many fruitful hours. In Philadelphia, we visited many historical points of interest such as Independence hall, with its liberty bell and museum of historical relics, old Christ's church in which many of the early statesmen were buried in their private pews and were later buried within its very walls; old Swedes' church, another church of quaint historical interest; the Betsy Ross home, where the first American flag was made; the old Customs house and mint, and homesites of many of the statesmen. The quaintness of Philadelphia impressed me immensely with its very narrow cobblestone streets, often only wide enough for one auto; its lighting system of gas lamps with 20 per cent of them still being lighted by lamp-lighters every night; its horses with watering troughs at advantageous points along the curbs; its Quaker customs such as not displaying any wares for sale on Sunday; and its old districts of houses, which have been lived in constantly. Since Roebling, N. J., was a home town of my husband, we were received into it with open arms by old friends. Roebling is a unique little village in that all the property including homes and places of business is owned by the owner of the John A. Roebling Steel corporation, which operates a large mill there. Only mill employees are permitted to rent homes within its boundaries. Working conditions are at a new high now with three eight-hour shifts operating daily in contrast to very little work during the depression. Experienced men are all kept busy. Worcester, Mass., offered us our next haven with many friends and

Mrs. Dorcy Smith of Portland visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Braden last week. Mr. Smith came out for the week-end and Mrs. Smith returned home with him. Mrs. H. H. Britt returned to her home here last Thursday after several weeks' visit with her father, G. Burnett, at Roseburg. Mr. Burnett came home for a longer visit with his daughter. Maverene Tallman spent the week-end with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Riegler, at Birkenfeld. Shirley and Floyd Young of Corvallis.
