Short Cut to Death

It's most embarrassing, comments Ray Conway, secretary of the Oregon State Motor association, to find yourself under someone's car just as you start on a little jay-walk across the street.

MY WISH

I held out my hand and wished for gold; It came but his touch was hard and cold. It did not bring love and the joy I had thought.

So I held out my hand and wished for wit same with blessed gifts from above; The insulted gold slipped away on wings When need it was needed for many things. Now never alone for gold shall I cry; I have those I love that gold cannot buy. ROSA F. ANDERSON.

YOUR GROCER

Just remember that your grocer is a person like yourself. He uses his very best to satisfy. If he sells you things inferior when you expect the best, you are not his customer. Don't complain, he has the letter you can buy.

When you're feeling very hungry And your pocketbook is flat, Tell your grocer—he's a kindly man, Then when paying brings the money, That in other days you lacked, Pay your grocer—don't misuse the credit plan.

Think not you should keep your money Now that you have had your fill, Or spend for gasoline and drive away. The grocery business isn't funny When no cash is in the till, Help your grocer—pay that little bill today. —MAE P. WELLS, Cornelius route 2.
