Trouble Broke the Day He Took Office, but Gov. Murphy Likes His Job!

LANSING, Mich.—A slender, bushy-eyed young man sits in the gubernatorial chair here these days, convinced that his job is the toughest of any governor's. But he likes it!

Consider the situation. Gov. Frank Murphy's troubles began the day he took office, last Jan. 1. He left the statehouse where he had taken the oath of office and plunged immediately into the maelstrom of the General Motors strike. And he settled it, after one of the most tense periods in American industrial life.

Came succeeding days in the labor picture, bringing new strikes, new violence in Michigan. Governor Murphy was on hand to iron them out. Finally, came the sweeping steel strike and with it bitter battles within Michigan, as well as within seven other states. Again Governor Murphy was on hand to meet a crucial situation. Certainly no governor has experienced such tremendous problems in such swift succession.

And all this, of course, came in addition to the ordinary duties of a governor. While Governor Murphy went hours at a time, without sleep, to effect some vital mediation, the Michigan state legislature was in session, itself a commanding problem. But Murphy managed to handle those duties, too, somehow, introducing some significant reforms in Michigan law.

WHAT is the story then of Frank Murphy? What is the background of this dynamic young governor who at 43 has already been boomed by Midwestern Democrats as a possible successor to President Roosevelt?

Frank Murphy was born at Harbor Beach, Mich., of a father who was not only Irish but Fenian. He grew up hearing factory whistles drum down to dusk and he learned early to resent those long hours, though they little affected him.

The son of an attorney, young Frank graduated from the Michigan Law School in 1914. When war came he joined the A. E. F. And after the war he was one of a group of young officers selected for university training abroad. Completing this he returned to the United States, took a job as a junior law clerk and ekeed out a meager salary teaching English in Detroit night schools. Subsequently he became an instructor in law at the University of Detroit.

Only one interlude came in this early formative period. That was when Woodrow Wilson named Murphy special United States attorney to handle war fraud cases. And so successful was this young attorney, at 27, that he sent three men to jail—the only ones convicted for profiteering. That record made Murphy famous; his career was launched.

end in Corbett visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bowen.

Lou Heim, who is in the Veterans' hospital in Portland, is improving. Mr. and Mrs. Menkin and family of Amboy, Wash., and Mr. and Mrs. Gardner of Molokai are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Aue.

Gaston Folk on Yellowstone Trip

(By Miss Helen Williams)
GASTON—Mr. and Mrs. John Blum and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Frye left Thursday for a two weeks' trip to Yellowstone Park and North-eastern Mont. Kenneth Carney will barber in Mr. Frye's place during his vacation.

Louis and Frank Heesacker and Louella Noack and Donald Olson left Sunday for a two weeks' stay at Oceanlake with the Heesacker children's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Thompson.

Mrs. R. J. Bates visited her daughter, Mrs. Martin Berglund, at Colton last week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Hatch spent a few days last week at Pacific City.

Mrs. Wray Hutchin is visiting her mother, Mrs. D. Schanck.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Porter and their daughter Inez, and a friend, Miss Catherine Moran, of La Grande spent a few days last week at Depue Bay.

North Dakotans Visit
Visitors at the F. D. Lynch home are Mrs. Agnes Lynch and children and Edgar Lynch of Jamestown, N. D. This is their first visit to the Pacific Northwest and they are delighted with the beauty of the country.

Louise Glascoe of Forest Grove spent the week-end at the Lawrence Williams home.

Governor Murphy in characteristic mood—top photo and left, intent on some immediate problem. And above, the cordial executive when the pressure is relieved.

And in 1923 he was elected judge of the Detroit Recorder's Court. Immediately he set about reforming judicial procedure, organizing a bonding bureau, calling in psychiatrists to advise about prisoners, calling experts to his assistance in passing sentence. Here was new kind of a judge.

Then, in 1930, came Detroit's bitter mayoralty scandal. Its mayor was recalled and Murphy was drafted by the liberals to run for the office. Characteristically, Murphy accepted, stipulating that no one must contribute more than $1 to his campaign. He called himself a "radical" but he went the job! In fact, he was swept into office.

And on Frank Murphy's official doorstep rested the then crucial unemployment problem. Promptly he acted, creating an unemployment committee to register families and find jobs, enlarging the public welfare bureau for relief, cutting other city expenditures to meet the load. That was a herculean task and his reward was re-election in 1932.

Then the President stepped in, named Murphy governor general of the Philippines. So successful was Murphy in that position that the islanders opposed his withdrawal to run for the governorship of Michigan. Murphy ran to help the Democratic cause in a key state. And in this he was successful.

So now he is governor—the most harassed governor in America. But he's meeting the challenge. Already there's talk that he may be appointed to the President's cabinet, probably as secretary of labor. Hitherto he has resigned every important public office he has held to take a more important one.

Unmarried, quiet, studious, seriously intent on his job, Governor Murphy brings to his difficult post a rich background. He is extremely well read in constitutional law, one of his chief loves.

He is not a back-slapper. He is neat but not fastidious. His complexion and his thinning hair are reddish. He has piercing eyes under bushy eyebrows. His face is the key to his character, with which his job as governor has made America familiar.
