Many Participate in Feast of Assumption St. Mary's

(By C. E. Barker)

ALOHA—This year's feast of the Assumption was rendered particularly memorable by the fact that the first religious reception and profession was held in the beautiful, recently dedicated chapel of the church, St. Mary's, on Valley near Huber, last Sunday.

Sisters M. Apollonia, M. Valeria, M. Francesca and M. Ermelinda confirmed their consecration by performing vows. The following were vested in the religious habit and the white veil of the novice: Sister M. Callista (Frances Bradford of Astoria); Sister M. Anthony (Lillian Keating of Portland); Sister M. Claudia (Margaret Schneider of Portland); and Sister M. Clara (Kathryn Thomas of Scio).

The sermon delivered by his Excellency, the Most Reverend Edward D. Howard, D. D., breathed forth the spirit of renunciation as seen in the religious life. He paid a glowing tribute to the lives of such characters as St. Francis of Assisi and St. Therese of the Child Jesus, who while appreciating the value of cultivating the intellect stressed the importance of developing the will in the attainment of self-conquest.

After the ceremony of clothing, assisting his Excellency, the Most Reverend, were: Reverend Charles M. Smith, John Bernards, B. V. Kelly, Walter Fitzgerald, S. J.; Michael Hurrican, S. J.; Matthew Jonas; Henry Orth; Rev. Fr. John Wehl, O. S. M.; George Fallu; Saal, J. A. Margraf, C. S. C.; W. J. Lyons, C. S. C.; Maxwell; John Larkin; Bardo M. Buff, S. D. S.; Neugebauer, A. J.; S. S.; Rob. Lutbauer; A. J. Rozewicz, C. S. C.; Don Breidenstein; Joseph Vanderbeck; Leo Linahen; and Jerome Schmitz.

The beautiful feast of the Heavenly Patroness, the large attendance of devout and devoted friends, the inspiring and intensely practical sermon of the Most Reverend Archbishop, even the ideal weather of the August Sunday all seemed expressive of unalloyed joy.

Remodels Place
P. D. Staub is remodeling and modernizing his home on Murphy road. He has a five-acre filbert orchard worth looking at more than once.

August 27 is the date of the last number of the open-air theatre. The picture is "The Girl of the Limberlost," from the novel of that title by Gene Stratton Porter.

Last Saturday morning an incubated egg wobbled in, trying vainly to induce any peaceful citizen of this town of good habits to insinuate that his condition was obnoxious. As luck had it, two of those interviewed were the constable and a state traffic officer. At the word "go" from the constable the i. g. shot his car astraddle the yellow line, the traffic officer following in a cloud of dust. The sequel to this story may be found in the police records at Hillsboro.

Hazeldale Quarry Begins Operations
(By Mrs. John Imah)

HAZELDALE—Hazeldale rock quarry started work Monday morning crushing gravel for the county roads.

Delbert Smith is at the home of his mother, Mrs. George Sandford, recovering from a badly cut hand.

Mr. and Mrs. Jenfred Bloomquist returned Friday to their home in Baker after spending a week with his father, Mat Bloomquist, at his pasture. Ferdunthals started out using a tractor for pumping water and later changed to electric power.

Ed Freudenthal reported that electric power was a much more satisfactory method and that it did not require a man to watch it. Power cost in 1936 was $5 an acre.

J. T. Humphreys of the state engineer's office told members of the party that it was necessary to have a water right from the state before taking water from streams.

Visit Thornheers
A new system was put in this year on the Hans Thornheer farm, the last place visited. Water is pumped here also by electric power. Pumping heads here vary widely and the result in costs are interesting to anyone contemplating any sort of irrigation system.

Attending at successive tours indicates increasing interest in irrigation, according to those in charge of the tours. The one this year attracted a total attendance of 400.

More than 100 were fed by ladies of the Hillsboro Grange here Friday noon, while 140 had lunch together at Eugene the first day. The tour was joined at various times by farmers to visit places in their own neighborhood.

Program at the luncheon here was in charge of County Agent Cyrus, who declared that he knows of no one in the county who has used irrigation that is not satisfied.

Thornburgh Sold
John Thornburgh, Forest Grove banker, who has 181 acres under water on his Gales Creek farm, declared that he was sold on irrigation and expressed the belief that everyone on the tour would agree. He said he was satisfied that it would double production.

Marshall Dana, associate editor of the Oregon Journal, expressed himself as impressed by the vitality of an idea that builds—supplemental irrigation. He pointed out that when the tours first started only 250 acres were being irrigated and that now this has grown to 20,000. Editor Dana said that there was no better testimony of its value than that it works and that it grows. He declared that it was desirable from the standpoint of a stabilized prosperity.

G. E. Goodwin of the U. S. army engineers pointed out that the construction of reservoirs on tributary streams was the best method of flood control. These may also be used for irrigation. Goodwin declared that 700,000 acres in the Willamette valley are practical for irrigation.

County Fair Opens Here September 2

The show is scheduled to begin promptly at 8:15 p. m. Wedding Feature
An unusual attraction Saturday night will be the wedding of a "mystery miss" and her swain. The identity of the couple has been concealed throughout the preparations, but the couple will be introduced to the audience at the ceremony. Immediately following the wedding, there will be a dance with music furnished by a 10-piece orchestra playing a waltz every other number.

Promptly at 10 p. m. merchandise certificates, valued at $300, will be distributed under the direction of a special committee selected from chamber of commerce membership. The prizes will be given only to those who are present on the grounds.

Announcements of the event will be made in the auditorium so that those who wish to dance can continue with their pleasure and still participate in the distribution. The distribution of certificates will be handled in the same manner as the successful distribution last year, the management has announced.

Mutt Dog Show
Saturday afternoon crowds will be entertained by the annual Mutt Dog show sponsored by the Hillsboro Rotary club. The show will open promptly at 2:30 p. m. and every boy or girl to exhibit a pet pooch will receive a prize, while prizes will be awarded for dogs exhibited in a large number of classes. A grand sweepstakes prize will be given.

For amusement of the younger generation attending, there will be a mammoth Ferris wheel, a merry-go-round and a tilt-a-whirl, all brilliantly illuminated. There positively will be no gambling, objectionable shows or concessions on the grounds, the management has announced.

Besides the entertainment and exhibits, Shute Park, next the fair grounds, offers Washington county's largest and best equipped public park as a place for family picnics and community gatherings. Many are planning to take advantage of this feature, according to fair officials.

Commercial exhibits this year have virtually doubled over a year ago with 54 displays already engaged. Nine Granges, and the same number of Farmer Union locals, have taken space, increasing this class of exhibits by one through the newly organized Dixie Mountain Grange.
