Breeding and Care Increase Milk Yield

¶ Cows of Oregon and Washington produced in 1936 a daily average of 2.35 pounds more milk than the national average. On June 1, 1937, milk production per cow in herd (including dry cows) exceeded the ten-year average for the same date in these two states.*

¶ Some of the finest cows in the Pacific Northwest produced as much as 90 pounds of milk daily.

Good breeding and correct care of livestock are prominent educational features stressed at the Pacific International Livestock Exposition to be held in Portland, October 2 to 10.

Prize-winning exhibits of fine livestock and highest quality farm produce will be numerous at this greatest exposition of its kind. The fascinating Rodeo and Horse Show, with exhibitions of jumping by Army riding teams from the United States, Canada, and probably Mexico, will be a spotlight entertainment feature to thrill one and all.

This bank is always ready and willing to cooperate with the livestock and farming interests of this community. We believe that you will benefit by attending the Pacific International Livestock Exposition.
