Patriarch Clings to Mode of Yesterday

given a ticket for violation of some minor traffic ordinance, but these have been no particular worry, he declares. Once the flivver bucked and refused to start and a traffic cop handed him a ticket for over-time parking.

"I just took it down to the police station," Hills chuckled, "and told the fellow at the desk that I'd be glad to get the thing out of town if he'd come down and start it for me. I explained that I'd been cranking on it so long I had to rest a bit. He tore the ticket up and advised me to get it started as soon as I could."

Buy's New Car
"I like that old car. I bought a new model once and had it brought out here. I got the garage man to take me for a ride and we went down the road at 50 miles an hour. I asked him why he moved his feet all the time and what the lever in the middle was for, and he explaining that he had to use the lever to shift gears, and use my feet at the same time.

"When we got home I jumped out and just told him to take it back and sell it again, because I wasn't taking any chances on killing myself running around the country that fast."

All of the time, while he was relating his motoring experiences, his faded eyes twinkled from under the white brows.

Born in Iowa
Hills was born March 20, 1844, in Iowa and enlisted in the Union army in 1861 in Illinois, serving 2 1/2 years as drummer boy for an Illinois regiment. At the close of this service he re-enlisted and went into the ranks, serving through the famous Sherman's march to the sea in the dangerous assignment as a forager.

His first battle was a Shilo, and one of his most exciting was at Stone river, 29 miles from Nashville, Tenn.

"The battle of Stone river," he related, "was the only time I ever was in an engagement where we retreated. All of a sudden I looked up and there they came. Everybody turned and ran, and men were falling everywhere. The fellow next me fell and I tripped over his bayonet and it stuck in my foot. I finally had to get hold of the gun and pull the thing out. I never ran so fast in my life as I did after that."

Made Prisoner
"I went to the hospital, and while I was there the rebels captured it. They counted out enough men to care for the wounded, and paroled them, and the rest they got ready to march as prisoners. While we were waiting around there, I told another fellow that I thought we might escape, because the guards weren't paying much attention and if we could get into a plum thicket we would be alright."

"We tried it and made the plum thicket, and then we got off across the fields toward another house we had been using for a hospital. We got there all right and helped with the wounded, and then returned to the place where we were captured. The guards thought we had been among those paroled, and so we escaped being prisoners."

"It was while we were walking away from the guards, across the battlefield that I saw a man lying between two big rocks with an overcoat over him. I thought he was dead and lifted the overcoat and found one of the men from my own company with a bullet through his stomach. We picked him up and took him in."

"When the G. A. R. met in Portland he came all the way from Nebraska to attend and we had a real visit. He thought I saved his life."

Hills fought in 21 battles during the Civil war, and returned after the fighting to make his own way in the world. He was a cabinet maker by trade and has several valuable pieces of furniture constructed and hand carved in the heavy walnut by himself.

From 1886 to 1891, he operated a bank in Heron Lake, Minn., and then became interested in the west when he visited California and compared the northern, midwestern winters with those of the coast. In 1891 he came to Oregon and for 16 years was a resident of Ashland.

In 1908 he bought a place at Garden Home where he has been living since. In 1924, his first wife died and a year later he married her sister, who had been part of his household for years.

All-Steel Hoppers---

An Important Improvement in McCORMICK-DEERING Grain Drills

McCormick-Deering 14-7 Grain Drill.

ALL-STEEL Hoppers on a McCormick-Deering plain grain drills—that's the big drill news now. Come in and let us show you this real improvement in a real line of drills. They will drill more accurately and last longer than ever before because the steel hoppers combine with the strong steel frame to hold the feeding mechanism in correct alignment.

The new hoppers on these McCormick-Deering Drills will not sag, warp, split, or rot—they are made of rust-resisting, heavy-gauge steel containing copper. They are water tight and grain tight—you can pour grain into them without spilling it on the ground.

Improvements have been made in the feeds, too, and there are roller bearings in the fully enclosed end axle boxes. Whatever kind of drill and attachments you want, we can furnish it.
