

Supervisors of Armistice Day Program Listed

Armistice day observance committees, as appointed by Hugh S. Rogers, commander of the Veterans Council, were announced at the legion meeting Tuesday night. Legion members are Jake Well, chairman, Leon Davis, Paul Patterson, A. W. Hoffman and V. Verne McKinney. V. F. W. members include Fred Corn, chairman, Lee Clark, L. E. Farrow and Ernest Plapp. These committees are to arrange for the parade and patriotic program.

A football game between Hills and Tigard will be a feature of the day. Game will probably start at 2 p. m. B. M. Goodman, coach, announced that this game would probably be an annual Armistice day event one year here and the next at Tigard.

Co-operation with the American Legion post in the Tigard district in the game program and possibly a dance annually was suggested by Patterson.

A committee, with power to act, has been named by Commander Jake Well to investigate the possibility of holding a dance of a "Night in Paris" celebration. It includes Leon Davis, chairman, Dr. Ralph Dresser, A. J. Foelker, Thurston Johnson and legion members of the program committee.

Legionnaires will co-operate with the Legion Auxiliary in the holding of a pot luck dinner at the Veterans' hall following the program and before the football game.

Wilson River Road Estimates Sought

Definite word on the status of the Wilson river cutoff project will be forthcoming in another week, it was disclosed Wednesday by County Commissioner H. D. Kerkman, following a conference in Portland.

L. G. Apperson, Portland city engineer and supervising engineer of the cutoff project, will resign as soon as his successor can be chosen, Kerkman said.

Estimates on the cost of completing the road are now being sought and will be placed before representatives of Multnomah, Washington and Tillamook counties in the near future.

Tax Collections Higher Than 1936

Tax collections at the Washington county courthouse led O. R. Heming, chief deputy in charge of the tax department, to estimate Monday that returns this year would out-strip those of 1936.

Thus far, the 1937 collections have amounted to $627,496.23, compared to $612,892.66 for last year. This means that nearly 72 per cent of the 1937 levy of $893,899.61 is being paid in, compared to 66 per cent of the 1936 levy, which came to $927,996.85.

"It really looks better this year," Heming declared. He added that $759.61 had been received in interest. Payment by quarters includes: First, $481,804.70; second, $71,094.45; third, $74,597.08.

Forty Rooms Join Junior Red Cross

Forty rooms in Washington county schools are signed up for Junior Red Cross membership, according to word Wednesday from the county school superintendent's office.

Sherwood school, with four rooms enlisted, leads the list, followed by Durham with three and Peter Boscow with two. David Hill and the B. W. Barnes junior high school each have one included in active membership.

An "educational" correspondence between schools in this county and abroad will head the program of the Junior Red Cross.

Bennion Gives Talk on Nesting

The fact that trap nesting is not entirely essential to the carrying out of a good poultry brooding program was pointed out by Noel Bennion, extension poultryman, in his discussion of "Breeding for Better Production" at the opening meeting of the monthly poultry meeting series which was held at the Beaverton Grange hall, Tuesday, October 13.

Sixty Washington county poultrymen were present at the dinner and meeting.

Egg production, pointed out Bennion, is governed by hereditary characteristics; namely, persistency of production, which is the length of the laying period; intensity of production, or rate of lay; age at sexual maturity, which is the time when the first egg is laid; winter pause, and broodiness. Eighty per cent of the variation in egg production is governed by the first three factors.

The average hatcheryman and poultry breeder, who is not established on a large enough scale to warrant trap nesting, can go over his flock four or five times a year and select the birds showing the various traits and leg band them with different colored leg bands.

Bennion further explained this method by pointing out that in the case of a flock of White Leghorns, the birds can be examined when they are from 150 to 180 days of age and those that have reached sexual maturity are banded with a white band. After about two months in production, the flock can be again examined for intensity of production and those birds showing that characteristic can be banded with a red band. During winter months the birds can be watched for signs of winter pause and those birds banded with the red band are probably a desirable type and can be culled out of the breeding flock.

It can now be seen, stated Bennion, that the birds which will be desirable as producers from the standpoint of egg production will be those birds showing intensity of production and persistency of production or, in other words, red, white and blue bands. Those birds wearing either green or black bands are probably a undesirable type and can be culled out of the breeding flock.

At first thought, mentioned Bennion, a poultryman is apt to feel that such a program is complicated and requires unnecessary effort. However, without a trap nesting record it is the only completely satisfactory method whereby a progressive production breeding program can be carried out.

In the conclusion to his discussion, Bennion pointed out that now is the time to have the breeder's flock going out or production so that the birds will be able to have a good rest and resume production in time for the hatching season. It is usually necessary to remove the lights and possibly remove mash for a few days in order to slow down production. Bennion did caution, however, that it is not desirable to throw the birds into a molt in order to get them out of production but rather to cause production to taper off so that the birds will go into a molt gradually.

After the rest period is past and the birds are to be brought back to production it is advisable, especially in the case of the breeders, to provide plenty of well-balanced feed, using a breeding mash containing plenty of vitamin D and to make liberal use of green feed. The breeder mash should, by all means, be fed to the flock considerably ahead of the hatching season, rather than to wait until the hatching eggs are to be gathered.

Forest Grove Vote on Bond Issue Set

A special election Saturday, October 23, will be held in Forest Grove to determine whether $16,000 in bonds shall be issued to construct a city hall.

Proponents of the building, pointing to a recent ultimatum from the state fire marshal, plan construction of a combined city hall and fire department headquarters. The new building was not provided for in the 1936 budget. The additional ground adjoining the present city hall has been purchased by the city.

$29,337 Sent Out by School Office

Disbursements of $29,337 in county school districts, are announced by the school superintendent's office.

Hillsboro, with a census of 1,237, led the list, obtaining $3,711. Rank next were Forest Grove, $2,325; Beaverton, $1,683; Tigard, $1,417; Aloha-Huber, $1,356; Cornelius, $979; Banks, $552.

County census, on which the apportionment was based, showed a total of 9,779 pupils, as compared to 9,379 last year. Disbursements allowed $3 per child.

Junior High Named After B. W. Barnes

Honoring an educator who has worked in the Hillsboro and Washington county school system since 1900, the grade school board has officially designated the junior high school as "B. W. Barnes Junior High School."

During his career, Barnes has served as principal of the one-room house school building. Later, after a four-year term as county school superintendent, he became superintendent of the city schools and is at present superintendent of the Hillsboro union high school.

Enrollment Record Made As O. S. C. Students Return

CORVALLIS—While a new high mark in registration has been reached at Oregon State college this fall, figures compiled by F. B. Lemon, registrar, indicate a more nearly stabilized enrollment than has been the case in the last few years.

Total fall term registration reached 3076 before the end of the first week, an eight per cent increase over the corresponding time a year ago. Late registration is certain to put the term total above 4000, as compared with a high previous record of 3779 made a year ago.

The freshman class this year, however, is little changed from last year, the total increase coming from larger upper classes moving up and from a larger number of transfers from other institutions. With the graduation last June of the last of the extremely small "depression classes," registration is not expected to increase so markedly from year to year as has been the case recently.
