

Developments in Vocational Training Cited

O. D. Adams, state director of vocational education, outlined the growth of vocational education in Oregon at the Hillsboro chamber of commerce luncheon Monday.

Adams pointed out that vocational education is based on teaching individuals better methods and workmanship while on the job.

The boy in vocational agriculture is responsible for the success or failure of his home project," Adams stated, adding that the vocational home economics student has a project in home making.

Vocational education also includes training of trade apprentices in the larger industrial centers in Oregon. These students are employed part of the day and are given technical training that better fits them for that position.

"Public schools must forget formalized, set methods of education," Adams stated, "A larger obligation must be recognized."

He said that 100,000 students have been trained in vocations in Oregon during the past 10 years, and that last year 82 occupations were included in the training program.

Ralph Campbell, assistant attorney-general, will be the speaker at the next noon luncheon. He will discuss unemployment compensation in relation to the merchant.

Farmers' Union Praises Work Fair Management

Vocal commendation of the recent Washington county fair, the Farmers' Union expressed its appreciation last week in a letter to the fair board.

The letter follows:

"The Washington county unit, Farmers' Union of Oregon, wishes to express its appreciation of the splendid fair held in Washington county this year under your able direction.

"We recall a little over a year ago when we were faced with the possibility of having the fair discontinued because of the lack of funds, and the year held to your course regardless of the resources and gave us a good fair, and again this year it was bigger and better and you deserve credit for discharging your obligation in such a successful manner.

"And, while we realize it is primarily a 4-H club exhibit we know there is inspiration and encouragement for the older ones also."

The letter was signed by Mrs. Mary L. Horner, secretary, in behalf of the organization.

Officials Ponder 1938 Budget Plans

renueed for 1938 if the budget committee approves.

Salary increases for Police Chief O. G. Freeman and his assistant, W. W. Weaver, granted last summer were also expected to come up for approval and renewal. In addition, the committee may consider the purchase of a police car.

Fire Chief S. W. Melhuus appeared before the last council meeting asking for the purchase of a fire ladder. In his request, Melhuus declared that a ladder was imperative in order to gain access to some of the taller buildings, and based his plea on the fact that paymen's on out-of-city calls registered a gain this year.

Upon the demand of several councilmen, the matter was left to the budget committee. The council, however, did not approve a $75 appropriation, to be matched by a similar sum from the firemen's association, for the purpose of remodeling the department headquarters.

Tuesday night's meeting will be given over entirely to preliminary estimates, and one or more additional sessions are believed certain.

A meeting of the sanitation committee Monday night failed to bring any decisive action on non-connected sewers. City Attorney Paul Patterson was instructed to review legal points on the connection of these sewers.

Cannery Output Higher Than 1936

With a record output of corn finished, the B. E. Maling cannery turned this week to the pear and pumpkin crop, with prospects that the 1937 total output in all departments may run 50 per cent above last year.

The cannery finished 5500 tons of corn last week, as well as 1200 tons of green and waxed beans. This is one of the finest showings ever made at the cannery, J. D. Rector stated.

The firm is putting out approximately 70 tons—or four cars—of pears daily, and 100 tons of canned pumpkin. Next week the salmon season will be on, pending word from Newport.
