Do you back your car from the garage into the street without first watching for pedestrians and oncoming vehicles? The Sportsmanlike Driver does not. He stops at the sidewalk and at the curb. He blows his horn, but places greater dependence on being alert.

Social Security Imposters Hit

Criminal prosecution by the department of justice of bogus collectors of funds in connection with the social security act's old-age insurance program has been requested by the Social Security board, according to advice received by James E. Peebles, manager of the Portland field office.

The board advised the department of justice that it has received information of several instances where money has been collected through such misrepresentation, and requested the department to investigate them and institute criminal proceedings. In announcing its action the board stated:

"The Social Security board has no 'old-age benefits collectors,' 'old-age insurance collectors,' or any other kind of collectors or financial agents. It has authorized no one to collect any fees from participants in the old-age insurance program.

"Wage earners who are entitled to lump-sum payments because they have reached age 65, and the estates of wage earners who have died this year, may secure at room 103 old Post Office Building the simple claims forms and advice absolutely free," Peebles said.

Relief Troubles Linked with Labor Situation

Just what part labor troubles play in the Washington county unemployment and relief situation was shown this week in figures released by Miss Alice Maxwell, relief director.

Out of 25 heads of families, who have applied for relief this month, 18 reported that they had been put out of work by shutdowns. These 25 wage-earners represented 104 individuals as family members.

In the majority of cases, Miss Maxwell said, unemployment could be laid to the doorstep of labor trouble. Furthermore, mills and other large industrial firms are shutting down earlier this year with the result that wage-earners are joining those who had only seasonal employment, Miss Maxwell declared.

The number of applications since the first of October is exceptionally large, and forecasts a heavy application this winter, despite shortage of available funds with which to care for relief recipients.

Merit Test Set by Commission

The selection of personnel for present or future vacancies and necessary expansion of the Unemployment Compensation commission will be made from eligible lists established from open competitive merit examinations.

A merit system of selection affords each applicant an opportunity to qualify for an examination department upon his educational background, previous experience, and individual traits.

Those persons who, upon submitting applications for examination, meet the minimum requirements as specified for each position and successfully pass a written test and oral interview, will receive a rating on the eligible list in accordance with grades received. One having a position on the eligible list will be subject to certification for a position in accordance with his relative rank on the list.

Each examination, to be given November 26 and 27, is open to both men and women who are citizens and a resident of the state for six months immediately preceding the final date of November 12 for filing applications.

Application blanks, qualified requirements, and information may be obtained from supervisor of ex-
