U. of O. Students to Welcome Dads

"Welcome Dad! You're going to have the time of your life!" This will be the greeting extended to fathers of University of Oregon students from Hillsboro who come to the tenth annual "Dad's Day" week-end at the University December 3, 4 and 5, according to word received here from the student leaders on the campus.

"Dad's Day" will be just that this year, the students point out, since students will have no other event on their schedule for the week-end. If fathers come on Friday, they will have an opportunity to see university life as it really is, and they have been extended a warm invitation by faculty members to even visit classes if they wish.

On Saturday the fathers will hold their mass meeting in the morning, and be honored guests at the annual banquet in the evening. During the afternoon they will be taken on tours of the new buildings on the campus. They will see gymnastic and other exhibitions in the new $350,000 physical education plant, watch the university champion swimmers in action in the natatorium, and see interesting book and other displays at the new $460,000 library.

The week-end will end officially on Sunday, when each living organization will honor visiting fathers, and special church services will be held.

"The Meanest Man" There is probably no place on earth better than a county newspaper office to learn how many kinds of people there are. Some get huffy if a statement is sent, others will not pay until they receive a statement. Some will pay without a statement, and others won't pay whether a statement is sent or not. Some think they owe more, and some think they don't owe so much. Some say they couldn't get along without the paper and others say it doesn't amount to much. But the meanest, scrubbiest in the list is the man who takes it and is shut off for non-payment and then spends all his time explaining how he stopped it because it was "no count."—Highland (Wis.) Press.

Consul's Talk Topic Germany

(Continued from page 1) the cause of much of Germany's difficulties. "However, don't blame all of Germany's troubles on the war. Many things happening subsequently contributed to the situation. The machine age and concentration of population in cities had much to do with it. At present a 'back to the farm' movement is on, for the farms must be preserved there as elsewhere. The farmer supports the nation in Germany as in all other countries."

New Plan Provides Answer Germany's answer to all these difficulties has taken the form of a national labor union, regulated labor conditions, work movements and labor camps, he said, with results already most satisfactory. As a consequence, he said, Germany today is working and happy. Mistakes have been made, but only because attempts to solve difficulties were being made. There are only half a million unemployed at present, and there is actually a shortage of skilled labor, Klostermann declared.

Strikes are now unknown in Germany, he explained, though in the past there were many labor difficulties there as elsewhere. Under the plans of the national labor union a strike is forbidden. In the event of a labor difficulty, the workers keep on working and settle difficulties through proper delegates and arbitration. The labor union is made up of the government, the worker and the employer, rather than just the workers, as in other countries. This, he said, is the foundation upon which the German labor movement is based.

"German labor camps are not penal institutions," he said, "but are somewhat comparable to our CCC camps. They do the same kind of work as they provide Germany's answer to the unemployment problem among the younger men. The army also gives opportunity for the young men to learn various trades and to take advantage of the splendid disciplinary training offered. In addition, the fact that many young men join the army each year removes a large number of idle workers from the labor market until it is prepared to assimilate them."

No War Envisioned The fact that Germany has a standing army does not mean that there is going to be a war, he said. Germany is opposed to war at any time, just as America is, and its army offers a chance for the instilling of the desired disciplinary and educational requirements, rather than an attacking force.

"The Nazi movement," he said in conclusion, "is based upon the desire of youth. It had its foundation among the younger people, who were determined that the troubles and strife which had faced their parents would not be their lot if they fought against it from the outset."

Klostermann, a native of Germany, is a naturalized American citizen, he stated at the beginning of his talk. He is a graduate of University of Oregon and was admitted to the bar in 1914. In a preliminary statement he outlined the duties of consuls, explaining that their work was of a commercial nature rather than diplomatic, involving such things as care of German nationals, in his case; issuing of passports and visas, care of estates of German citizens, clearing and entering of German ships and aid to German nationals in distress.

Klostermann was introduced by H. A. Kurath, Howard Hadley, chamber commerce vice-president, acted as chairman in the absence of President P. L. Patterson.

S. C. Soren, Chinese consul at Portland, was announced as speaker for next Monday's noonday luncheon meeting.
