Accumulated Hop Crop to be Used

Another surplus diversion program applicable in Oregon has just been put into effect with the approval of an agreement by the secretary of agriculture and the Pacific coast hop industry to purchase old-crop hops and divert them to other than normal channels of trade.

With old-crop hop supplies accumulating at the rate of 15 million pounds in the past three years, prices have become so depressed that current quotations are slightly more than half of the 1936 price. Plans announced through the San Francisco office of the triple A call for payments to growers of $7 per standard bale of approximately 200 pounds less operating costs.

Funds for the program are available under legislation setting aside 30 per cent of the annual U.S. customs receipts to assist farmers in disposing of surpluses and expanding markets. Surplus hops will be diverted into fertilizer and mulching uses or other purposes approved by the AAA.

New Dentist Opens Hillsboro Office

Dr. R. E. Silvis, former Vernonia dentist, opened offices in the Commercial National bank building this month in the former quarters of the late Dr. Charles Lamkin, whom he succeeds here.

The new Hillsboro dentist expressed his liking for Hillsboro and its agricultural surrounding territory, and will establish his home here soon, he said. Until the completion of the present term of school, his wife and children will remain in Vernonia, he said, but after that will join him here.

Dr. Silvis was located in Hill City for many years until closing date of mills there caused a depopulation of the town. After a short while in Portland, he located in Vernonia, where he has worked and made his home for several years until coming to Hillsboro early this month after taking over the practice of Dr. Lamkin, who died here last summer. After spending considerable time in renovating his offices and making a number of minor changes in equipment and laboratory, Dr. Silvis opened his practice here last week.

Large Industrial Growth Predicted

Greatest industrial growth in the history of the United States was predicted for the Columbia empire by William F. Selleck of Portland in speaking before the Rotarians Thursday noon. Factors that make for this were given as half of the nation's potential hydro-electric power, a great supply of raw materials, splendid transportation and unrivaled recreational facilities.

Most important industry, he said, is lumber which yearly brings in $100,000,000 to the Columbia river area. Welfare of this industry, it was pointed out, affects all business lines.

Rotarians are to bring toys of small value to the meeting today and they will be turned over to some welfare organization for distribution to needy children.

Judging was held Monday night and was limited, as announced, to those filing entries at the Argus or with or members of the committee. Many attractive displays were noted by the judges on rounds.

Displays not filing entries and up Monday night, but deserving of commendation from the judges were those of the following: Edward Hurd, Frank Challacombe, A. H. Busch, Baseline street; R. R. Easter, Pilgrim House, Third avenue; H. A. Dech, Lloyd Brown, First avenue; J. L. Anderson, West Main street; Lester Ireland, Lincoln street; T. W. McDonald, Jackson school road; J. H. Garrett, A. L. Amacher, Jackson street; J. M. Person, W. C. Christensen, Fifth avenue; Young's Funeral Home, Sixth avenue.

Homes of Committee members V. W. Gardner and Verne McKinney had displays, but were not in competition.

Members of the committee, Robert Burlingame, Gardner and McKinney, expressed appreciation of the splendid co-operation of the people of the community in the lighting displays which are becoming more attractive each year. They were particularly sorry that so many failed to file their entry blanks, saying that quite a few of these were deserving of particular attention.

Many attractive Christmas displays and decorations grace the windows of commercial concerns in the city and together with the decorative street lighting make Hillsboro a sightly Yuletide center.

The committee asks that all displays be continued until New Year's day, and urge all who can to add their bit to the Christmas lighting at least some kind of a decoration. The decorated Christmas trees inside the homes also helped to spread a great deal of Christmas cheer to the passerby.

The city hall has been artistically decorated by members of the fire department, who have also for several years decorated the large tree in the court yard.
