

Automatic Steno Used in Court for First Time

First mechanical court reporting in Washington county was done in Circuit Judge R. Frank Peters court room this week when a "steno-type" machine was used to record court proceedings and testimony.

When E. E. Hansen, regular circuit court reporter, didn't show up Monday, it was necessary to call in a substitute. George F. Cropp of Portland appeared for the court session with his machine, which is much like a miniature typewriter, and which records the typed shorthand on a paper tape similar to that used in adding machines.

It was later revealed that Hansen was marooned in Seaside by slides and rain, having gone there over the Christmas holidays.
