

Hillsboro Bank Opening Set for January 8

Grand opening of the Commercial National bank in Hillsboro has been set for Saturday, January 8, from 3 p. m. to 10 p. m. according to an announcement of bank officials yesterday.

Finishing touches to the bank's sweeping $14,000 remodeling project will be finished in time for the Saturday open house, it is announced, with interior decorations making up the major portion of the work left undone as yet. Bank patrons will be surprised by the great alterations made in the bank's interior, with a doubling of lobby area, four paying and receiving windows, a new window and a statement window, the officers' new quarters, two roomy new vaults, one for bank records and supplies and the other for safety deposit boxes and the bank's money, and the new mezzanine floor.

The present Commercial National bank, formed by the merging of two local banks ten years ago, operates under a charter granted in 1910, but huge strides in banking business here during the past five years have made the alterations necessary. Bank handling since 1932 have more than doubled, with a sizeable increase expected when 1937 figures are released next week.

Changes in the bank have not enlarged the space, it was stated, but have brought into use for all purposes.

Davis Given 7-year Term

Seven years in the Oregon state penitentiary was the term meted out to Frank L. Davis, 44, in circuit court here Monday. Davis had been found guilty by a jury in court on a morals charge a week ago. He was arrested in Hillsboro last October 7.

An annulment decree was handed down in circuit court last week in the marriage of Fred Pitts to Sarah E. Williams. Pitts had been divorced from a former wife in 1934 by order of the Juzgado del Registro Civil, or court of civil registry, at Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, and charged in his suit for annulment that the divorce was illegal, since the Mexican court at no time held any jurisdiction over either himself or his wife.

Trial of Herbert C. West and James B. Elkins, arrested November 10 and later indicted by the grand jury on two counts of assault and robbery while armed with a dangerous weapon, was set for January 24, according to the circuit court trial calendar for next month, announced Tuesday.

State Commission Involved

State supreme court's affirmation of a circuit court order in the case of Henry Bell vs. the State Industrial Accident Commission and Z. J. Riggs, intervenor and respondent, was filed here this week with the county clerk, supreme court order confirmed the local court's action in dismissing the suit as to Riggs and ordered that Riggs receive disbursements to the amount of $83.50 from the accident commission to cover disbursements in the state court.

Figuring in two new suits just filed this week, the State Industrial Accident Commission sought, through its lawyer, Lester A. Sneyd, to recover fees allegedly due from Frank A. Noyes and Henry W. Hunt. Noyes, engaged in plumbing and sheet metal work and Hunt, who operates logging work and a sawmill, were said to have failed to file a statement declaring intention not to contribute to the accident fund, although at all times both have been subject to the Workmen's Compensation act.

Other circuit court business of the past week involved orders in the following cases: Hamilton company vs. Lucy L. Curry et al, decree; Tualatin company vs. J. L. Lefferts, Benjamin and Louise Cooley, dismissal; Pacific university vs. Percy and Emma May Long and R. P. Shaw, confirmation of sale; and dismissal in four suits of the Dairy Co-operative association against A. H. Vetsch and Sons Creamery, Snow Cap Dairy, Blue Ribbon Jersey Milk company and Brandes Creamery.

County court orders were given in the estates of Isabella B. Johnson, Nils O. Boleen and August Boge, with Henry E. Boge being named administrator; and in the cases of the guardianship of Dorothy and Louise Good, and Jean A. Schuman, with the Portland Trust and Savings bank named as legal guardian of the Schuman estate.

Critics Say Joe Louis Erred in Watching Max Schmeling Perform in Victory Over Thomas

BY IRVING DIN.

JOLTING Joe Louis, champion of all the world's heavyweights, is reported cutting his sleeping time from 12 hours a day down to 10, and his ration of pork chops from seven to five, so that he may better prepare for those couple or three tuneup bouts he wants before he meets Max Schmeling again next June.

But it'll take more than a couple of tuneup bouts to prepare Joe for the German, say the experts.

The biggest thing in his training routine concerns not left jabs and right hooks—but the Louis state of mind.

It's being whispered about that Louis' handlers—Julian Black, John Roxborough and Jack Blackburn—made a grave mistake when they allowed Joe to occupy a ringside seat the night Schmeling belted the daylight-out of Harry Thomas in Madison Square Garden.

The manner in which Maxie went to work on the Minnesota heavy weight—the way he crashed his heavy, deadly right to Thomas' jaw time and time again, couldn't help but leave an impression on the impassive, immobile Louis, who watched the Uhlan in action.

IT was just a year and a half ago that the same right hand blasted Louis into darkness, and Louis, scouting it in the Thomas brawl, couldn't find a single flaw in the way it operated. If anything, it struck with more accuracy and destructive force, once Max found the range.

It isn't very possible that Louis wasn't affected by the sight he saw—the serious, methodical Schmeling dropping his foe by the canvas six times before the referee halted the bout to save Thomas from further punishment.

And no doubt his mind flashed back to that hot night in June, 1936, when he was kayoed for the first time in his life.

Louis, outwardly, is confident there will be no repeat performance of that scene. Why, he figures, should he, a younger man with just as good a punch, fear the Teuton, who crowding 33, may have lost some of his sting in the 18 months he has been absent from the ring wars?

Max Schmeling may not have quite the power he had in June, 1936, when he and Joe mix it up again early next summer but he certainly won't be a set-up. Joe Louis, sitting at the ringside a couple of weeks back, realized that. He had only to watch that right hand to know.

He'll be much faster next June. Critics have made much of the German's long layoffs, but each time after a period of idleness, Max has snapped back into action with as much vigor and strength as ever.

Max Schmeling had not quite the power he had in June, 1936, when he and Joe mix it up again early next summer but he certainly won't be a set-up. Joe Louis, sitting at the ringside a couple of weeks back, realized that. He had only to watch that right hand to know.

It must be remembered, also, that Max exhibited no great speed in that tuneup bout. However, he didn't have to. He merely was a fraction of a second faster than the slow-moving Thomas.

Champion Joe Louis wishes Max Schmeling good luck before the latter kayoed Harry Thomas. Boxing bugs claim Joe shouldn't have witnessed the action that followed.

Relief Office Receives Help

Help in large quantities was given local relief office workers over the Christmas week-end, in response to a plea for aid in handling the extraordinary heavy year-end burden, according to relief office workers.

Civic organizations, church groups and private individuals united in rendering aid to the needy, it was reported. Rotarians contributed over 40 toys gathered as "admissions" to their Christmas meeting. Nearly 200 donations were received from the Baptist church. Others took care of various families, names of which were supplied by the relief bureau.

Aid-Givers Thanked

"The relief office and its workers wish to extend their thanks to the response to our plea," it was stated here this week. Several contributions of foodstuffs, including canned fruit and vegetables, were brought directly to the local relief depot.

Miss Alice V. Maxwell, retiring administrator for the local relief committee, left here for California yesterday morning. She will enter Red Cross work there and continue training in social work. Her successor, Mrs. Ann Kellogg, named here recently, will officially take over the post of relief committee secretary and administrator. New Year's day, but has been in Hillsboro for several weeks past, working with other relief directors and familiarizing herself with the local setup.

Schick tests for determining immunity to diphtheria will be continued during the coming year, it was announced yesterday by Dr. D. McDonald, county health officer.

Hillsboro schools will be examined during the next two weeks, he said, with days and hours for the Schick testing to be arranged by Miss Corinne Pennington, city health nurse. Anyone who has ever had toxin anti-toxin or toxoid injections should take the immunity test as well as those who have never been vaccinated. Dr. McDonald declared.

SCARLET FEVER (By State Board of Health)

Scarlet fever spreads before the doctor is called. Many cases of this disease are so mild that a physician is not consulted and the mild cases that are able to be up and about often spread this disease. For this reason, all persons suffering with fever, sore throat, vomiting and a rash should be isolated until expert advice can be secured in regard to the nature of the disease.

Although scarlet fever exists most frequently in a mild form, there are occasional outbreaks of the malignant type. Even a mild case of scarlet fever may be followed by severe complications. During the past ten months, scarlet fever has been increasing in this state. Thirty-five cases were reported in September, 80 cases in October, and 110 cases in November. Scarlet fever can be avoided. Children should be kept from coming in contact with persons who have colds and sore throats. Remember it is the mild cases that spread this disease.

People in general have an earnest desire to be good neighbors but too many fail to appreciate what this means when it concerns the health of neighboring children. Failure to report scarlet fever and failure to observe proper quarantine regulations too often results in the exposure and illness of others. A quarantine sign or warning should be regarded as an emblem of honor. Families that observe health regulations deserve the respect of their neighbors.

The spread of scarlet fever can be avoided by prompt isolation and calling a physician upon the first showing of sore throat. Prompt reporting of cases of scarlet fever results in an early establishment of precautionary measures. According to the scarlet fever and severity, scarlet fever should be quarantined from 21 to 28 days. If the discharges from the nose, throat, ears, or other parts of the body continue longer than 28 days the quarantine must be continued until they stop. There may be a persistence of contagiousness which will continue without symptoms and these cases may be regarded as carriers of the disease. This accounts for occasional scarlet fever cases occurring in out-lying country districts in which it can be shown that the patient has had no direct contact for months with a case or with anyone in contact with a case. The most important source of possible infection is the mild unrecognized case. It is quite certain that scarlet fever may occur without any rash at all or with a rash so negligible as to escape observation, but most mild cases have a sore throat and skin eruption. Proper isolation of all children with sore throats and skin eruptions will not only prevent the spread of this infection to others but will also insure the patient the best chances of recovery. Isolation should include putting the patient to bed since rest is an important precautionary measure in preventing complications.

Aged Man Rescued from Burning Home

Flames fanned by terrific south wind destroyed the small cottage home of Edwin Marshall, 76, late Monday night, and all but claimed the aged resident of the Witch Hazel district three miles east of here.

Two passersby, Vincent Short of Portland and Lloyd Junker of Hillsboro, driving along the Tualatin valley highway, noticed the flames inside Marshall's home and stopped to investigate. They found Marshall in bed and unaware of the fire, they reported. They carried him to safety, clad only in his shirt and underwear, but the whole house and all its contents were a total loss as flames leveled the structure to the ground. Marshall was taken to the Washington county hospital.
