Oregon State Expert Talks at Beaverton Poultry Meeting

Pacific coast poultrymen must either materially improve their egg quality or cease to compete on the eastern egg market, warned H. F. Cosby, head of the poultry department of the Oregon State college, at the monthly poultry meeting held at the Beaverton high school January 11.

For several years Pacific coast eggs have topped the eastern markets, stated Cosby, but that condition no longer exists because the eastern producers have made considerable improvement in the quality of their eggs by following a program of careful storage and handling.

Cosby cited how the poultry industry has now become a specialized field with three major divisions, and commercial poultrymen making up the principal divisions. He further advised that the success of the industry is going to be dependent upon a progressive breeding program which will decrease the mortality among the layens, increase the laying ability as well as the egg size and quality, decrease broodiness and build up body weight.

Pair Executes "Fast One," $28 Disappears

Evidently executing a well-laid plan, a pair of smooth-working robbers made off with $28 from E. H. Tigar, proprietor of the Tigar Mercantile company in Tigar last Thursday evening.

One man, described as being five feet, 11 inches tall, about 26 years old, and equipped with a Hitler moustache, came into the store asking for a nickel's worth of kerosene. He accompanied Tigar as they went into a storeroom to get the oil.

Meanwhile, the Hitleresque moustached gentlemen departed hastily, leaving one five-cent piece when he rang up the nickel sale. Tigar found the bill had been swept clear by the time he got to the front door, but the red light and the dim outlines of a rapidly-moving car remained to remind him of his misadventure.

Health Officers Attend Meeting

Large amount of correspondence was handled, Mrs. Morgan said. Letters were sent out to all teachers on November 17 and 22, and on December 1, 10 and 29, with follow-up cards being sent after the first of the year to all communities from which the returns had not been received.

Chairman Takes Credit. "Teachers look credit of the sale in all districts where there were no community children," the county sale director said. "I wish to commend them for the very fine spirit in which they put across the sale. In many of the districts there were requests for more seals, and very few districts failed to make their quota. A large number of refills were sent to the districts and community salesmen after the first allotments had been mailed out."

Newspaper publicity was carried almost 100 per cent by the various publications throughout the county. Mrs. Morgan declared, and theatres in Hillsboro and Forest Grove aided greatly in presenting slides and reels of the tuberculosis fight. In addition, endorsement of the county seal sale was given by all three members of the Washington county court.

Since fifty per cent of the total amount collected through the seal sale is kept in the county, the health association will receive $632.05 this year, or more than the total amount collected only four years ago.
