Aloha Woman Has Large Collection Art Treasures

(By C. E. Barker)

ALOHA—Mrs. Joe Bush has a large chest filled with art treasures representing many years of patient devotion. Last Saturday, in the presence of the writer, she opened this treasure store and spread the first one on a bed. She calls this Grandmother's Flower Garden quilt. It took her one month to bring this garden into bloom. Next she exhibited the Dahlia quilt, then the Poinsettia. It would cost a week's work to count the stitches in the latter. Followed the Yellow Rose of Texas and the Sunflower. She intended the Sunflower as an appropriate gift to Governor Landon in case he rode triumphantly into the White house.

The Baby Face she says she will give to her first great-grandchild. She now boast four great-grandchildren. This quilt has fine stitching into it 12 baby heads, no two alike. The Drunkard's Path zig-zags, but its general directions are straight King Tut is so named for its golden voluptuousness. But Tut never saw a fine a quilt. In Water-Lily-Cattail there are bright green water, the brown cattails and the floating waterlilies.

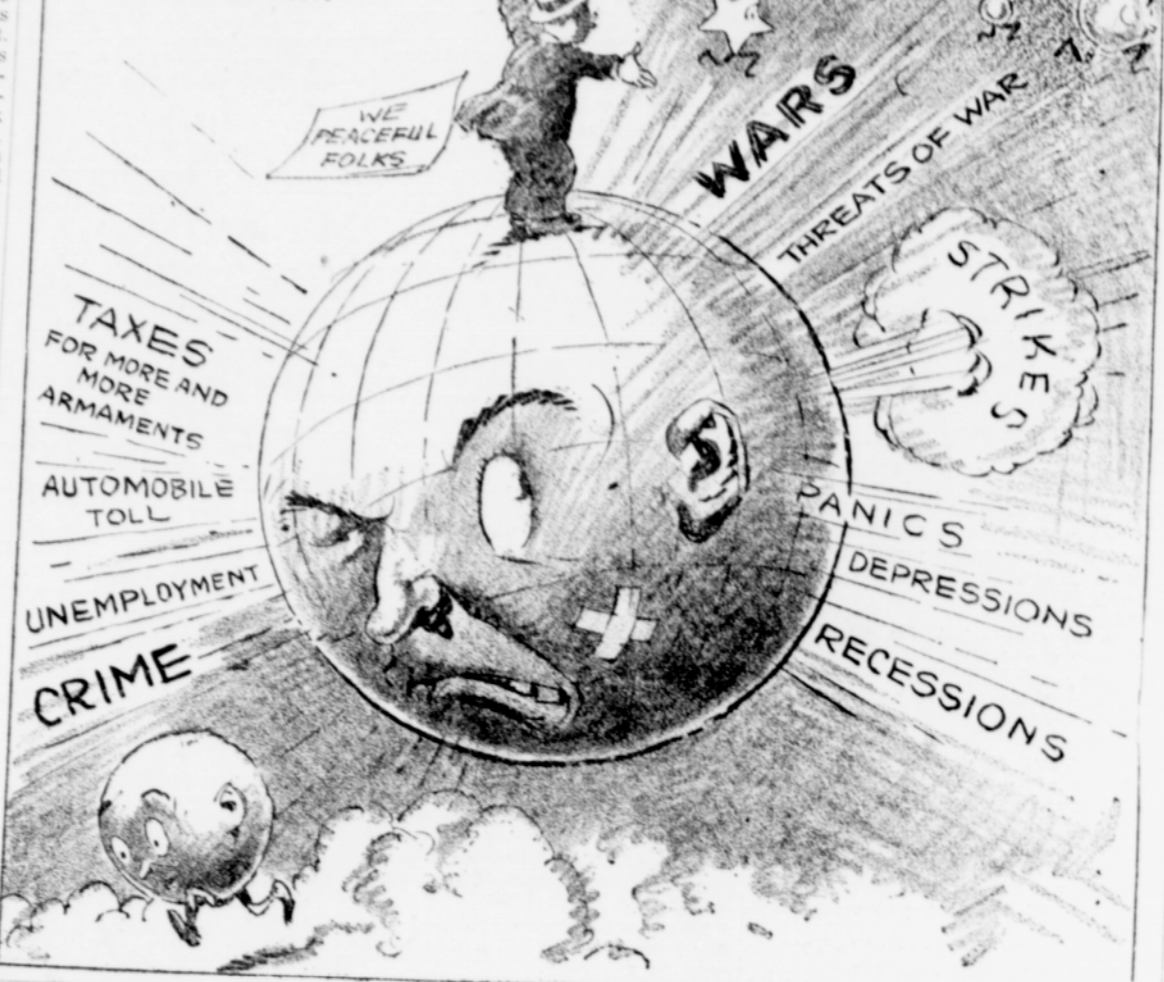

The Lone Star is a glimmer of gold pearl, turquoise and egg shell white. Mrs. Bush got her inspiration from this beautiful creation from an Oregon sunset. The Star of Bethlehem contains 13 large stars. A lady 80 years old gave her the pattern. The Daisy was invented while visiting. It contains 578 pieces. Thirty little Dutch boys, enough alike for identical make up the pattern for the Little Dutch Boy. The Alphabet, objects representing the 26 characters; Farm Life, even to field mice, scare-crows and a tired boy who would rather a-fishing go; another from a pattern in use for 100 years; The Poppy quilt, sleep-producing; Apple quilt, follow in quick succession. The Democrat Rose is described in the Portland library. "Old Quilts." The Bird quilt shows 36 species of birds stitched in. The Butterfly is gorgeous in 30 varieties of color.

Thirty little girls in Sunbonnet Girds, no two dresses alike. The Flowers. There is the famous Double Wedding Ring. The Texas Star contains 1160 pieces. The Oriental Poppy, Old Pine Tree, Tulip, Around them all—but we can't record them all—there are 80 of these beautiful quilts.

Mrs. Bush is now working on five quilts from a pattern her mother used in 1850. She has a bedspread, her granddaughters called a coverlid, her quilt, and the flax and wool. Her great uncle wove it on a hand loom. The design is foliage, and colored in black, green and tan. The fabric is surprising well preserved.

Mrs. Bush has exhibited her treasures only once, and on that occasion she won three prizes at the Washington county fair.
