Farmers Hear Farm Reports

tee of farm women were given in a report by Mrs. Lester Cypher, committee chairman. Successful and happy living on a farm depends upon two factors, the report stated, namely them as good home and good, nutritious food. They can be arrived at only by careful planning and budgeting of farm expenditures, which require close co-operation and understanding by the whole family.

Betterment of home conditions can be effected by increased sanitation, including attention to both water supply and sewage disposal, the report continued. Frequent testing of water samples was urged as an important health measure. Modernization of the farm kitchen was recommended as a great step in providing a more livable home. With 37 per cent of the population living on an annual income of $1500 or less, working out of a carefully planned budget for the home was recommended, as was the further development of 4-H work.

4-H Leaders Sought

Difficulty of securing capable and willing 4-H leaders in many of the county's communities was brought up in ensuing discussion. At present, only two out of 11 rural youths of 4-H age are engaged in club work. Several commented on the fact that it is nearly impossible in some sections to find those with the necessary ability and the required time to devote to the work.

Assistant County Agent L. E. Franke

Assistant County Agent L. E. Franke, head of 4-H club work here, declared "You can't just take a person and make a leader of him—a leader must be born that way. We are willing to give help, training and information to leaders, but we must have them to start with." The county is too large for any effort to be made to conduct clubs without benefit of leaders.

Present on plans

Present on plans for a program to meet the needs of young people between the ages of 15 and 24 years, to include those too old for 4-H club work.

Part-Timers Too Many

The land use committee report was given by John Kamna, chairman and pointed out that part-timers in the county are much more numerous than the county's industrial development, upon which the part-timers depend, warrants. Because of the lack of outside work, many of the part-time farm tenants have been thrown on relief, thereby increasing the burden of the taxpaying farmer.

Developing a farming system

Developing a farming system on better hill soils aimed at lessening of erosion; increases in acreage of long-lived legumes and grasses; grass-seeding of the 7000 open acres along the Tualatin and limitation of farm extension to specified areas were recommended in the committee's report.

Vanderzanden, in a comment

Vanderzanden, in a comment on the report, made a plea for a return to sound, old-fashioned ideals for those making a farm start. Good behavior, courteous industry and a spirit of self-help are necessary, he pointed out. Expenditure of money and contracting of debts for non-productive investments and luxuries is accountable to a great extent for farming failures of the present day. Vanderzanden declared.

Competition from other and similar

Competition from other and similar food products may have a greater effect on dairy products in the future, the livestock report stated, declaring that this called for a program involving most economical production, raising and marketing of quality, a more extensive marketing program and participation in national advertising.

A very slight increase in the number

A very slight increase in the number of dairy cows was thought likely, with a raise in hog production included as one recommendation. It was pointed out that pork is the only commodity which Oregon does not raise in sufficient amount to supply its own needs. Increase in number of chickens or turkeys is unwarranted, and sheep should be kept only in sufficient numbers to clean out fence-rows and for similar needs. The livestock report was read by County Agent Cyrus in the absence of Committee Chairman Henry Hagg.

Changes in number of acres devoted

Changes in number of acres devoted to various crops now raised in the county were urged in the report of the crops committee read by Chairman Fred Jossy. Included in the recommended acreage alterations were a 1500 increase for corn, 2000 fruit and nut increase, 1100 increase in vegetable acreage, 7500 increase in hay, 1000 increase in barley, 600 increase in clover seed, 900 increase in seed grass. Turning over of the 7000 to 11,000 acres of Tualatin overflow land to pasture and seed grass was recommended.

Weed control was brought up

Weed control was brought up by Cyrus, who explained there are two ways in which weed control districts may be formed under the Oregon law. The first involves an order of the county court declaring the whole county a district, and the second requires that a group of at least seven farmers, representing 51 per cent of the landowners of their district, draw up a petition. In this county, he said, about 1200 acres are summer-fallowed annually, principally for the purpose of weed-elimination. At present there are no weed control districts in the county, he stated.
