Pictures Depict Early Mill Scenes

Away back in the early 1890's pictures were taken each year at the Davis Brothers' sawmill southwest of Beaverton. Now, brown with age, they are on display in the Argus windows, recalling to mind scenes of nearly half a century ago.

Four pictures shown represent a year apiece from 1890 to 1893. One shows a scene deep in the woods, with five yoke of oxen working at the logging end of lumber production. Others depict scenes at the mill showing various workmen with age. The pictures are the property of W. E. Davis, now of Banks, route 1, also shown in several of the pictures.
