Put This Little Diesel to Work

Here is a Diesel tractor that fits the small operator's needs. It is small in cost and in operating cost . . . yet big in its ability to accomplish difficult farm work. The D-2 Diesel pulls 3 plows under severe conditions and 4 in average soil . . . and it uses it on less than 1 1/2 gallons of cheap diesel fuel per hour.

Fuel savings are as much as 75 per cent.

Better apply this money saver to your farming operations.

Oregon Motorists Reduce Accidents

Oregon motorists are already "cashing in" on their successful efforts to reduce the automobile's toll of accidents, injuries and deaths, since nearly all insurance companies in the state have announced rate reductions ranging from 5 to 15 per cent on property damage and public liability insurance. Secretary of State Earl Snell declared today.

Some companies have made a flat cut in the amount of premium payable while others have offered a 15 per cent rebate to all policy holders who will have no accident claims charged against them in the course of the year.

Snell said that savings to Oregon drivers effected by this action of the insurance companies are expected to run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, although an exact estimate cannot be made at this time.

Credit for a share in Oregon's accident reduction was given directly to Snell's organized safety efforts by John R. Cooney, chairman of the board of Metropolitan Casualty Insurance company of New York, on a visit to Oregon. Cooney quoted National Safety council figures giving Oregon's reduction in highway fatalities for the first three months of 1938, compared with the first quarter of 1937, as 40 per cent, fourth best record among the nation's 48 states.

Snell said that in addition to the saving of 23 lives so far this year, Oregon motorists reported nearly 700 fewer accidents up to April 30 than during the same period last year.

"This action of the insurance companies comes as tangible evidence that Oregon's safety campaign is making headway," Snell added. "We are hopeful that our drivers will not only continue to

Arty Wife Leads Farmer Husband On Hectic Trial

ALOHA—She graduated from a decorative art school and then married a plain farmer.

She set about beautifying things. She made her husband wear a necktie to the fields. She worked his initials in large yellow letters on his blue overalls. She tied ribbons and sewed lace on his pajamas. She kept at him till he planted a border of marigolds around his cornfield. He had a hectic time training his mules not to trample on those flowers. He caused till he felt too wicked to go to church. She decorated the dinner plates with sprigs of lobelia. The hired man stuck a stalk in the salt and tried to eat it. She stuck a pheasant feather in his straw hat and he hung his head in shame. She caused the barn to be painted a polkadot. The cows refused to enter. The men had to go to the farthest corner of the pasture to milk. She tied a skunk cabbage to the horses' bridles.

She painted stripes on the mule's legs and called them "zebras." She dusted the goats with talcum powder to kill B. O. The garden tools fluttered with ribbons. She lined the hens' nests with sweet peas. She dressed her boy up in Lord Fauntleroy clothes and sent him off to school. He came home covered with mud; the gang objected to his make-up.

Both husband and wife have profited by their companionship of many years. The farmer now eats pie with a fork, uses a napkin, takes the spoon out of his cup, shaves twice a week and buys clothes that fit him. The wife decorates her garden with a hoe, offers horses apples instead of skunk cabbage, learned her lesson about dressing Junior, and knows the proper relationship between corn and marigolds.
