AAA Wheat Loan Rate Guarantees 70 Cents Bushel

Loan rate on wheat which is the minimum allowed under law, but which with benefit payments will guarantee Oregon growers around 70 cents a bushel, has been announced by the agricultural adjustment administration for the 1938 crop. Announcement of the loan rate was the final step in putting into effect over-normal granary provisions of the 1938 farm act.

Since the announcement Oregon officials of the state AAA office have met in Pendleton with officials from other northwest states and have completed detailed arrangements for handling actual placing of loans in counties.

Variable Schedule Set
Loan rate schedule varies throughout the country, according to type of wheat and location of various terminal markets. For the Pacific northwest, both Portland and Seattle were designated as terminals with base loan rate at either Portland or Seattle for No. 1 soft white wheat set at 67 cents a bushel.

In figuring loan rate at country points, there must be deducted from this basic figure amount of local freight rate to Portland and 4 cents a bushel to cover handling charges. Before loans can actually be made wheat must be in storage at least 3 days and must be paid in advance. Where farm granaries are used the government will compensate the grower for storage costs if wheat is later turned over in lieu of payment of loan.

Man Thought Dead
Subject of Order
Judge Donald T. Templeton last week signed an order in the estate of Leavitt S. Birdsell ordering printing of a notice for a hearing regarding the presumed death of the man.

Birdsell, for many years a Washington county resident, is assumed to be dead by many, since he has not been heard from since October, 1929. In the court order it was stated that his "last will and testament" should be admitted to probate and Curtis J. Birdsell is entitled to confirmation as executor thereof. September 10 has been set as the day for hearing of evidence in the matter.
