

Immediate Use of Lead Arsenate Spray on Green Apples, Pears Advised by County Agent Cyrus

Application of a lead arsenate spray at this time for the control of worms in apples and pears should be made, according to County Agent W. F. Cyrus. Adult codling moth are now laying eggs and these eggs will hatch in the course of seven or eight days. The young fruit should receive its protective coat of spray before the eggs hatch.

Powdered lead arsenate used at the rate of three pounds to 100 gallons of water is a standard recommendation that has been proven effective when thoroughly and properly applied. Calcium arsenate has been successfully used but has never been proven superior to lead arsenate. From time to time various other materials are offered on the market but in Western Oregon the arsenate, and preferably lead arsenate, is perhaps the more effective.

Spray Program Needed

The home orchardist is always confronted with the problem of how many sprays to use in combating disease and insect pests. If the fruit is to be marketed commercially it is necessary that a practically full spray program be carried out, which means two or three times and in the spring following.

Superior sprays in the spring follow-up by perhaps one combination lime-sulphur and lead arsenate, and these succeeded by perhaps three cover sprays. The home orchardist need not follow quite so complete a spray program.

He can successfully combat the ordinary diseases and insect pests and produce a good quantity of home use by using a lime sulphur dormant spray and a combination lime sulphur and lead arsenate spray at the time the blossoms drop and perhaps one cover spray.

In all of these spray preparations whether in the home orchard or commercial orchard, thoroughness of application is essential. Not only the fruit but the foliage as well should be covered.
