ROSICRUCIANS TO SEEK "PHILOSOPHER'S STONE"

The ancient alchemical search for the "chymical marriage" of the elements and forces of the universe will be resumed by Rosicrucian scientists in modern laboratories.

The consulting physicians and chemists of the newly established Rosicrucian research laboratories in San Jose, California, are to be convinced that the allegorical "Philosopher's Stone"—an intangible medium which the alchemists, fathers of modern chemistry, believed bound together all animate and inanimate things—has a truly scientific existence.

Al Richards of Aloha, Oregon, local member of the Rosicrucian Order, AMORC, says he has received a communication from the Grand Lodge of the philosophic Order to the effect that the prejudices which have existed toward the veiled writings of the alchemists will be put aside and a serious attempt made to prove their contentions in fully equipped laboratories, using the facilities of modern science. Al Richards states that the "Philosopher's Stone" was but a popular term used by the alchemists for a prima materia, an energy out of which it was said all matter evolved, even the lower forms of life. The transmutation of one form of matter into another was thought possible in past centuries by the discovery of this prima materia and the controlling of its development. Modern physics has proven transmutation possible but has heretofore scorned the belief in a universal, an element or force which binds together into a complex unit living and inorganic matter. It is the hope of the Rosicrucians, therefore, states Al Richards, to vindicate the ancient alchemists who were often executed for their bold beliefs.

The alchemical research will begin in the new Rosicrucian AMORC laboratories early in September this year, it is said, after a thorough analysis of the translated writings of the ancient Greek and Arabian alchemists is completed this summer. The mystical phraseology used by the alchemists is one of the greatest difficulties the researchers will encounter. As an example, states Al Richards, the "Philosopher's Stone" is often referred to in old manuscripts as a substance—"twas not of wood, nor of any man of metal, nor was it in any wise of stone, nor of horn, nor of bone."

Rosicrucian Secret Teachings are offered to those who seek to use them solely for the perfection of their inner faculties, and in the mastering of the daily obstacles of life; the International Organization of Rosicrucians will be happy to receive the requests of those who believe that worthiness and sincerity determine the right for one to have such wisdom; to them, a copy of "The Secret Heritage," a fascinating book, will be given without price; let this book guide you to the conservative plan whereby you may widen your scope of Personal Power. Simply address your letter to Scribe S. E. C. AMORC Temple, Rosicrucian Park, San Jose, California.—Paid adv.
