Rotary Discusses Aid to Students

Possibility of local business men giving help and advice to boys and girls of the high school in the selection of vocations was discussed at the Rotary club luncheon Thursday with John R. Cox, high school principal, as chairman. Five high school seniors present to give their views were Ned Ross, Bill Lieder, Roy Burnett, David Wiley and Tom Chamberlain. Mr. Cox pointed out that the objective of schools was to provide a general education.

Student Body President Ross said the conversation in the study halls was not about the European war, but about Hilhi's football chances. He pointed out that there are nine lettermen back and prospects looked good, there being 75 out for first string. He pledged student aid in local projects.

C. T. Richardson proposed that the Rotarians consider itself as a committee of the whole to assist students and talk with them about determining their vocations.

Sam Coy is chairman for today's luncheon.
